TREATY KILLS PEACE HOPES, SAYS HEARST

Equality Possible Only by Anglo-American Understanding, He Declares

In all Hearst newspapers yesterday there was reprinted from the leading newspapers of the British Empire, a statement by William Randolph Hearst, giving his opinions of the importance of maintaining understanding and good relations between the United States and the British Empire.

Mr. Hearst declared that the London Naval Treaty "will probably do more to prevent a genuine agreement between English-speaking peoples than anything that has occurred in recent years."

He declared that "entrance into the League of Nations would be a suicidal policy for the United States, while an agreement with the British Empire would be a natural policy, which would immediately benefit the two nations and have an ultimate beneficient effect upon all other nations."

FOR REASONABLE TARIFF

He declared that the attitude of the statesmen of the United States with regard to agreements with other nations is "fundamentally unsound, diametrically wrong and a policy of pacifism, not of peace and of sentimentalism rather than of sound sense."

He decried the sky-high tariff policy of the politicians of the United States, while advocating a reasonable tariff and a reciprocity agreement between the United States and the British Empire.

He stated that an Anglo-American understanding is only possible on a basis of absolute equality.

The Hearst statement was given in an interview to Charles O. Smith, Washington correspondent of the Southam group of Canadian newspapers.

WORLD COMMENT

The press of the British Empire recognized it as a thought compelling document and gave it prominent display in all their editions.

The following dispatches to Universal Service show how important the statement was regarded by the editors throughout the British Empire:

HULTMAN WARS ON GUNMEN AS 2 ARE SHOT

Police to Use Machine Guns; Auto Patrol Planned; Victims Shield Assassins

Shooting down of two men in front of the Liberty Hotel early today was followed several hours later by a virtual declaration of war on gunmen by Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman.

The men fired upon from a curtained automobile in Warrenton st., just after leaving the hotel, were Guy ("Morgan") Perrelli, 36, of Battery st., North End, and Joseph ("Chick") Bruno, 30, of Maverick st., East Boston.

It is believed the police that men connected with a large pool operating out of the South End were responsible for the shooting.

Police Commissioner Hultman's declaration of war against gunmen came in announcement of a program of police practice at Fort Standish with machine guns, sub-machine-guns and rifles.

The police head also declared he is contemplating establishment of a permanent auto patrol in all police divisions as a move in the checking of crime and quick capture of criminals.

Capt. Louis Lutz, department drillmaster, will be in charge of the range practice for proficiency at Fort Standish, and he will be as-

$25,000 QUINCY FIRE SPREADS

A two-alarm fire swept a building housing two stone-cutting sheds and a polishing company at the corner of Brook rd. and Water st., Quincy, today, causing damage estimated at $25,000. The fire started in the office of Alphonzo Pagagni, owner of one of the stone sheds, and gained considerable headway before it was discovered.

Flames spread to the home of Mrs. William Martin, located in front of Pagagni's office, and did considerable damage to the rear roof and the roof of her garage. Sparks ignited the roofs of two homes a quarter-mile away, but flames were checked before they had gained headway.

It was hoped for some time that Boston College would be able to arrange a game with Iowa State for the Legion week program, but when it was learned a few days ago that there would be no chance to play Iowa, the tilt with the Marines was arranged.

Zepp Hops for Spain Tonight

Lakehurst, N. J., June 2 (INS)—Twenty-two passengers will be carried by the Graf Zeppelin, which is scheduled to leave at 10 o'clock tonight for her home port of Friedrichshafen, Germany, via Seville, Spain, on the final stretch of her tri-continental journey.

This announcement was made at noon today at the Hamburg-American line offices at the hangar. The names of the passengers were to be given out later. There was the possibility of some cancellations.

Loading of the freight which the Graf will carry back to Germany has been started. The amount of freight was considerably less than was taken on her last trip across the Atlantic. Again, 750 pounds had been put aboard by noon including five automobile tires consigned to the King of Spain.

All forenoon visitors came to the hangar and peered at the huge German dirigible which was angrily berthed beside the U. S. dirigible Los Angeles.

One of the passengers will be Fred M. Hoyt, vice-president of Goodyear Zeppelin Corp., a guest of Commander Hugo Eckener.

The following bulletin was sent to the Graf Zeppelin this morning by the U. S. Weather Bureau:

"For start beginning tonight Lakehurst to Newfoundland and banks, clear to partly overcast with moderate west or northwest winds at surface and fresh northwest winds at 2000 feet. Winds will shift to north northwest or north off Nantucket, backing to northwest and west about longitude 55. Newfoundland Banks to longitude 35 partly overcast with strong west or west southwest winds."

DUNHAM'S BAIL SET AT $25,000 IN PAGE CASE

Candy Company President and Three Alleged Salesmen Are Arraigned in Cambridge

Otis E. Dunham, president of the firm of Page & Shaw, Inc., together with seven alleged stock salesmen, were arraigned in Middlesex Superior Court today in connection with the alleged fraudulent sale of stock of the candy firm.

Dunham, arraigned on eight counts returned in a secret indictment by the Middlesex county grand jury last week, was placed in $25,000 bail by Judge James H. Sisk.

Arraigned with Dunham were Percy E. Powers, Harry Jaspon and Harry Sternberg, all three, according to the police, being stock salesmen who disposed of the stock of the Page & Shaw Co. All four pleaded not guilty.

The other four arraigned and pleading not guilty were Isaac Hart, Joseph Polley, Jacob Stanton and Samuel Schwab. These four, according to the Middlesex county authorities, were all salesmen who disposed of the Page & Shaw stock.

Hart and Polley were held under $25,000 bail each. Stanton was held under $600 bail and Schwab $3000.

Dunham, the president of the company, is specifically charged with conspiracy to steal, conspiracy to sell securities without authority from the State Department of Public Utilities, conspiracy to defraud, and being an accessory before and after the fact of committing larceny from five different persons.

LESS BAIL FOR OTHERS.

Dunham pleaded not guilty and the court directing that his bail be furnished by at least two bondsmen. Dunham remained in the detention room for several hours, awaiting the arrival of bondsmen.

Jaspon's bail was fixed at $3000. Sternberg was released on bail of $5000. Powers' bail was also fixed at $5000.

Following the arraignments Atty. Walter H. Levis of Boston, on behalf of Frances H. Baxter and Minerva E. Baxter, elderly sisters of Marston's Mills, filed an attachment against Page & Shaw, Inc., the Central Trust Co. and the Harvard Trust Co.

JURY MEETS IN GARRETT CASE

The regular June session of the Suffolk grand jury convened today and was to receive the last of the evidence in the case against Oliver B. Garrett "and others," which already has resulted in the indictment of Garrett, Mrs. Garrett and Mrs. Lillian V. Hatch.

Chester D. Siebert of Hyde Park, the "missing witness," whom Dist. Atty. William J. Foley could not find in time to place before the special session, was prepared to tell his story.

WIFE BLAMES STROKE ON GARRETT EXPOSE

Retired Rum Raider Falls in Front of His Home; Was Scored for His Inactivity

Three weeks after his retirement in the face of criticism of his activities in the "Garrett case," Capt. George W. Patterson, former commander of the liquor squad, suffered a paralytic shock at his Dorchester home today and is near death.

He collapsed on the sidewalk outside his house at 13 Moultrie st., and remained in a coma for several hours afterward. His arms and legs were paralyzed by the stroke.

The mental strain of the Garrett investigation, in which he was one of the principal figures, is believed by his wife to have resulted in the shock.

He is the third witness stricken since the start of the investigation of his former chief raiding officer, Oliver B. Garrett.

"He has been under such a heavy mental strain in connection with the Garrett investigation and the disbanding of the liquor squad that his worry undoubtedly brought on the stroke," Mrs. Patterson said.

"He had nothing to hide in his relations with Garrett and he volunteered every bit of information he possessed. He had no authority to get rid of Garrett, although, two years ago, he did recommend his transfer from the liquor squad. That was up to the commissioner."

WAS TO TESTIFY.

The police veteran was stricken as he awaited the arrival of an automobile which was to carry him to the courthouse, where he was to confer with Dist. Atty. William J. Foley regarding appearance before the grand jury in prosecution of a larceny complaint against former Probation Officer John Mulvee.

Only yesterday he and Mrs. Patterson drove from Parmenfield, Me., where they have been spending a two weeks' vacation at their camp.

Mrs. Patterson saw him fail to the sidewalk and she called to some men from a nearby garage. They carried him into the house. Dr. Simon Curran of Norfolk st. was summoned and pronounced the retired captain in serious condition.

He was unconscious for nearly three hours and then emerged

Prisoners Who Play Golf in Cell Are Fined $15 Each

Pleading "nolo" to charges of drunkenness, John Goode, 27, son of former Mayor Timothy Goode of Cambridge, and George Goss of Swampscott, were fined $15 each by Judge Avery in Quincy Court today.

Goode and Goss were arrested in a coupe parked at an early hour in South Main st., Randolph. In the car were golf sticks and golf balls, which after the arrest were placed near the prisoners' cell. Goode reached out and drew them in.

Then he and Goss started putting in the cell. Patrolman McAuley went there to stop the noise and Goode, it is alleged punched him on the nose.

SENATE FOES OF NAVAL PACT TO FIGHT EXTRA SESSION THREAT

WARNING TO HOOVER IS PLANNED

President to Be Told That He Should Delay Submitting Treaty Until Next Winter

By KENNETH CLARK
Universal Service

Washington, June 2 — Senatorial sentiment for postponement of the London naval treaty until next winter increased today.

So strong is the feeling against a prolonged fight over the treaty at this time that a movement is afoot to ask President Hoover to reconsider his threat to convene the Senate in special session following regular adjournment to consider the pact.

Treaty foes are openly demanding the delay until next December so the American people will have ample opportunity to examine the naval agreement. Senator Johnson (R.) of California and other opponents are confident the treaty will be repudiated if the people are given time to understand it thoroughly.

MONTH REQUIRED

The foes have served notice that no less than a month will be required to debate the treaty if President Hoover insists upon the special session starting late this month.

Administration leaders do not relish the prospect and have no heart for another protracted fight, especially as most of them consider the treaty is not of such paramount importance that it requires special attention before the next regular session.

One administration spokesman, who obviously did not want his name quoted, expressed the belief that "if there is a special session and if a motion to adjourn are made within a week afterwards, the motion would be carried."

That would mean the end of the fight until winter, for it is not believed President Hoover would venture to reconvene the Senate.

POSTPONE SESSION

Another possibility is that the projected special treaty session may may be postponed until November right after the election. Some leaders foresee two advantages in this program. First, they say, it would give the people opportunity to study the treaty, and, second, it probably would mean the pact could be disposed of without the bitter fight that now is certain.

The treaty enters its final stages in the Senate foreign relations committee today. Chairman Borah has called a special executive meeting to consider the secret treaty correspondence that passed between the United States, Great Britain and Japan before and during the London negotiations.

This correspondence will reveal treaty foes have indicated, that the administration capitulated to the British limitation thesis four months before the conference. It is unlikely the secret documents will be made public, Borah declared.

Borah hopes to have a favorable report on the treaty by the end of the week.

Harvard Trust Co. were named as trustees for Page & Shaw, Inc., and the attachment, according to the papers, was preliminary in an action of tort or contract for the recovery of $4000 the sisters are alleged to have invested in the stock of the candy concern.

Warrants have been issued for a number of others in connection with the stock sale.

CALLED WORTHLESS

The state alleges that several million dollars' worth of stock in the firm of Page & Shaw was sold to the public without the department of public utilities giving its sanction to the transaction.

The stock in the candy concern was first placed on sale late in 1929. It was known as "Class A" stock. The Boston Better Business Bureau reported to the attorney-general's office that in the belief of the bureau the stock was worthless.

Hultman Wars on Gangs as 2 Men Are Shot Down

sisted by Lieut. Thomas Kavanaugh, assistant drillmaster.

Although both of the men shot down in Warrenton st. were in a serious condition at City Hospital, they refused to admit that they had any suspicion as to the identity of their would-be slayers.

SEAL THEIR LIPS

A peculiar angle of the case was that when police, acting on information immediately following the shooting, rushed to an all-night speakeasy in Friend st. they learned that word of the shooting had reached there before them, resulting in speedy closing of the place.

To all attempts by police to get information from the wounded men at City hospital, Perrelli and Bruno were cold.

Perrelli responded to all questions with an impatient:

"Don't bother me," and Bruno reiterated: "I don't know anything."

Bullets removed from the men were found to be .38-caliber slugs, although police believed at first that the fusillade of shots fired at the men had come from a machine gun carried in the slow-cruising curtained car.

Perrelli was shot in the right side of his back, the bullet lodging in his lower abdomen. Bruno was shot twice, once in the left side and again in the lower left groin. Both will recover.

The men, according to their own first admission, turned and started to run when they saw the curtained car come up slowly abreast of them with guns poked out of it. They were shot while running through Warrenton st. toward Washington st.

Alberi Farina, giving a Dover st., South End, address, was taken into custody for questioning following the shooting, but was released several hours later.

PRONED "NEWS"

He said he knew Perrelli and Bruno, but declared it was only chance that he was standing near when the shooting took place.

Farina was picked up while telephoning word of the shooting from City Hospital to someone in East Boston.

Police Inspectors John Dorsey and Stephen Flaherty with Special Officers Larry O'Connor and Henry LaCroix rushed from headquarters to the hospital and then to the scene of the shooting. Later, Inspector James A. Dennessey of the homicide bureau went to the hospital in an effort to get statements from the wounded men.

According to the story of the officers working on the case, Perrelli with his pal, Bruno, had been to the Liberty Hotel. After spending an hour there, the two started out of the door into Warrenton st., where Perrelli had his new roadster parked.

The automobile, containing four men, came along slowly police say, and two of the men stepped out of the car and sent a fusillade of shots at the pair. Perrelli dropped to the ground and Bruno, who went to the aid of his pal, was struck by two of the shots.

Patrolman Henry Foster, who was on Tremont st., near the Elks Hotel, rushed across the street as the two men jumped into the car, pulled down the curtains and speeded away in the direction of Washington st. Foster gave chase on foot and fired three shots at the assailants' car, just as it turned into Washington st., headed toward Dover st. The escaping gunmen returned fire, but Foster was not hit. The officer was unable to commandeer a car to give chase.

DEATH CAR SEEN

Foster rushed back to the fire station on Broadway to where Perrelli had run from the scene of the shooting. The wounded man collapsed as he informed firemen on duty he had been shot. A taxicab rushed him to City Hospital. In the meantime Bruno, who had ran towards Tremont st., was picked up by another taxicab driver and taken to hospital.

Various stories were told police regarding the shooting and all stories tallied to the effect that the gunmen's car had made several trips shortly before two o'clock into Warrenton st.

Police stated that a checkup revealed that both Perrelli and Bruno have been affiliated with several big Boston bootleggers and racketeers and a further checkup revealed the fact that Perrelli's name has been connected with a number of Boston women. It was also learned that both men have been involved in a feud with members of a Boston gang of racketeers and that the shooting was the outcome of an argument that has been brewing for a good many months.

COMB UNDERWORLD

Patrolman Foster, who made a heroic but vain attempt to trap the assailants, stated that he heard at least fifteen shots and he was certain that the gunmen used a machine gun.

Every section of Boston's underworld is being combed by police inspectors and other plainclothes officers in the search for the gunmen.

Sergt. Edward Ryan and Patrolman John Murphy of Station 4 found Perrelli's car, searched it and later brought it to a garage for further investigation. They stated they found nothing in the machine that would help them in their investigation.

TRIAL WITHOUT JURY STIRS HOUSE IRE

Minority Report to Score Hoover's Enforcement Commission's Proposal

Washington, June 2 (AP)—Five members of the House judiciary committee today filed minority reports against the Hoover Law Enforcement Commission's bill to authorize United States commissioners to try petty prohibition offenses without a jury.

The bill is to be considered by the House tomorrow. The five members contend it is unconstitutional, depriving an accused of trial by jury, and inaugurating a new procedure in criminal prosecutions. They hold it will not assist in relieving congestion, because it is not practical.

Those signing the minority report are Representatives La Guardia, New York, and Bachmann, West Virginia, Republicans, and Tucker, Virginia, Dominick, South Carolina, and Celler, New York, Democrats.

"The bill authorizes the commissioner to recommend the punishment, but the constitution prevents him saying whether the defendant is guilty or innocent," said La Guardia. "The bill is highly technical in its provisions of criminal jurisprudence, yet it is drafted in the phraseology and nomenclature of the crossword puzzle."

RAIN PUTS END TO SALT RAIDS

Bombay, June 2 (AP)—A drizzling rain fell over Bombay presidency today, marking the rainy season. The rain will mark the end of salt raids as tomorrow the salt deposit areas will become morasses of mud and slime, inaccessible to the raiders.

The final raid was undertaken yesterday at Wadala by 15,000 Nationalists volunteers and spectators. Approximately 150 persons were injured when the police charged with their lathis, or bamboo clubs.

With abandonment of the campaign against the salt law, the Nationalist volunteers are stressing the non-payment of taxes, a campaign of possibly much more serious import for the British authorities.

Two villages on the northwestern frontier of India today were occupied by British troops after they marched into Charsadda and Prang to put an end to Communist activities. Eight agitators were arrested.

CANNON RELICS OF 1776

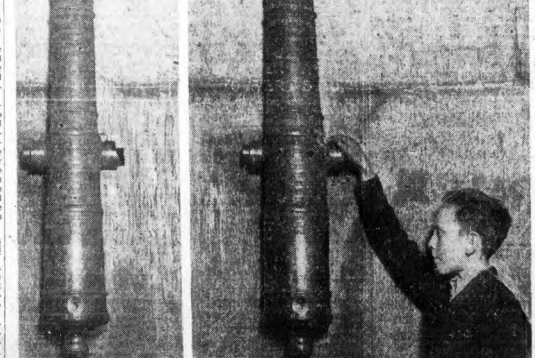
High atop Bunker Hill monument, and so inconspicuous that few of the visitors who make the tortuous climb ever notice them, are two ancient bronze cannon.

The guns, now the property of the City of Boston, stand not only as a monument to the spirit of the Revolution, but to the audacity of three noted patriots, Thomas Dawes, his son William, and Sam Gore.

These cannon, first the property of the Ancients, then seized by the British during their occupation of Boston, then stolen from under the very noses of the Red Coats, and then the property again of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery of Boston, were used throughout the Revolutionary War by the Continental soldiers.

The guns were originally cast for Capt. Adino Paddock's company of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery. They were kept at the company's gun house, located at what is now the corner of Tremont and West sts. The British, when they seized Boston, took charge of the gun house and established a guard there.

On Bunker Hill Monument—Seen 'Em?



These two bronze cannon are located at the top of the shaft of Bunker Hill Monument. Are you one of the very few visitors to that historic spot who has seen them? The cannon at left is slightly damaged, due to a premature explosion at a celebration in 1821.

War Bride Suicide

Mrs. Valentine Richardson, a French war bride, who committed suicide when all hope of a reconciliation with her husband was gone. Police are seeking Edward Richardson, former soldier, so he may be told of her death.

FINDS HIS WAR BRIDE DEAD

Edward Richardson, American aviator during the war, who parted from his French war bride in Boston a year ago, returned to this city today to claim her body.

Mrs. Valentine Richardson, whose romance blossomed within sound of the guns at an American airdrome in France 12 years ago, killed herself yesterday in a squalid room in East Lenox st., South End.

She was penniless and had despaired of a reconciliation with her husband. Police found Richardson at Hartford, Ct., where he is now living, and informed him of her tragic end. The former army flier came to Boston today and claimed his wife's body at the South morgue.

From their arrival in this country following the armistice until a little more than a year ago, Mr. and Mrs. Richardson lived happily together in Jamaica Plain.

When they parted, he left Boston and she moved to Quincy. There for a brief time she conducted a lodging house, but could not make it pay. Four days ago she moved to the South End house. She sought in vain to find employment.

TARIFF DRIVE ON TODAY IN SENATE

Bitter Battle Looms as Democratic Chiefs Prepare Attack

Washington, June 2 (US)—An administration massed attack to drive the Smoot-Hawley bill through Congress opens in the Senate today.

First action will be on the conference agreement on the flexible provision. Senator Smoot, chairman of the finance committee, predicted it would be accepted after several days of fiery debate.

Final passage of the bill was forecast by the middle of June. President Hoover, it is believed, will sign it.

NEW DEVELOPMENTS

All lines were drawn for the long awaited showdown, chief developments today were:

First—Republican leaders of flexible provision as now drafted. Senate and House praised the flexible provision as now drafted, in a statement issued by the Republican national committee.

Second—Senator Barkley (D.) of Kentucky assailed the tariff commission statement that the bill greatly aids agriculture as "vicious propaganda" in a statement issued by the Democratic national committee.

ATTACK READY

Third—Mathew Woll, president of the American Wage Earners' Protective Association, in a letter to members of Congress, attacked the protest of Henry Ford against the tariff bill.

Democratic leaders in the Senate were prepared to deliver a scathing denouncement of the measure as against the best interests of the farmer, of industry and of labor.

PATTERSON IS STRICKEN

from the coma to utter only a few words.

THIRD WITNESS STRICKEN.

Capt. Patterson was the third victim of the nemesis which appears to be stamping on the trail of Garrett case witnesses. The first was John F. Sullivan, Ritz hotel proprietor and star government witness, who entered the Danvers state hospital after testifying at the Hultman-Kennedy inquiry.

Sullivan recovered to give evidence before the grand jury which last week indicted Garrett, Mrs. Garrett and Mrs. Lillian V. Hatch.

Joseph Levine, another witness, collapsed while under questioning in the attorney-general's office. He appeards to have recovered but last week he dropped dead.

O nthe same day a false rumor spread through the city to the effect that Sullivan, too, had died.

CRITICIZED BY WARNER.

Capt. Patterson was a member of the Boston police force for 38 years and during all of Garrett's association as a liquor squad leader was his commanding officer.

His examination by Damon E. Hall, during the attorney-general's Garrett inquiry, occupied nearly a full day, and in Atty.-Gen. Warner's findings he was severely criticised for having failed to perform his duty and for "shutting his eyes" during Garrett's alleged unlawful pursuits.

When Governor Allen removed Police Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson as a result of the same findings and Eugene A. Hultman was chosen to fill the post, Capt. Patterson filed application for retirement.

HIS PENSION AWAITS.

Commissioner Hultman signed the application and sent it to Mayor Curley in the belief the mayor's signature was necessary to its granting. It transpired, however, that Hultman's signature granted the application, and the liquor squad leader was retired after the new commissioner had abolished its units.

The first payment of Capt. Patterson's pension cans due last Wednesday but he was in Maine and the money is still waiting at the city treasurer's office.

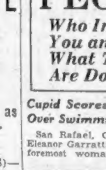
San Rafael, Cal., June 1—Miss Eleanor Garratti, one of America's foremost woman swimmers, will probably abandon her swimming career.



Eleanor Garratti

The reason is that today she has acquired a brand new husband in the person of Lawrence Edward Saville, prominent San Francisco engineer. They were married with the utmost simplicity at a ceremony attended by their immediate families and close friends.

While Miss Garratti declared that she was uncertain whether she would continue her swimming career, close friends opined she would not compete in any more championship events.

Peary's Skipper Now Full Fledged Talkie Star

Montreal, June 2—Capt. "Bob" Bartlett, who captained Perry's ship in that memorable dash to the North Pole in 1909, has blossomed out as movie actor and seems to be doing quite well, thank you.

Capt. "Bob" Bartlett

He appears, playing the role of skipper of an Arctic sealing vessel in a talking production of a seal hunt off the coast of Labrador.

The drama was produced in dialogue by Varick Frissell, Yale graduate, who has achieved some fame in travelogue picture taking.

It took two months to make the film. At times the actors were confronted with the necessity of transferring their equipment over ice floes and leads of open water for days together.

Premier Tardieu.

In his address the premier outlined the policies of his government since he took ovar the reigns, and pointed out that at all times there has been an effort made to give France the type of leadership it deserves.

Hundreds of citizens from every walk of life gathered to hear Tardieu's statement. At its conclusion the consensus of opinion was that he had outlined a vigorous forward looking policy that was destined for success.

LOSSES IN FATAL STORM MOUNT AS FARMS REPORT CROP DAMAGE

VEGETABLES, FRUIT HIT HEAVILY

Four Greater Boston Children Dead in Its Wake; Property Suffers Extensively

Reports from all over New England indicated that yesterday's gale, in addition to taking four lives, caused far more widespread damage than at first believed.

Crops and fruit trees suffered heavily. Apple trees were special targets and in many cases were stripped of their buds. Vegetable crops, which have been perking up in the sunshine following the week's rain, also suffered a heavy blow.

Property damage was also heavy, according to reports being received.

Street and park departments in cities throughout Massachusetts had large forces at work cleaning up the debris. Huge limbs were ripped and strewn about thoroughfares. Roofs of a number of less sturdy buildings were torn off.

FOUR KILLED

The fatalities of the gale were:

Shirley Elwood, 5, of Surrey st., Cambridge.

Samuel Sarsceno, 14, of Hale st., West End.

James Di Agostino, South Margin st., West End.

Catherine Kelleher, 14, of Magnolia st., Dorchester.

The Elwood girl was killed by a skylight bulkhead, ripped from the roof of her home.

Sarsceno and Di Agostino were drowned at Lake Massapoag, when their canoe was upset by a gale.

RESCUED OFF BOAT.

Nancy Carroll, moving picture star, with her husband, James Kirkland, and others, were rescued when their 35-foot cruiser Katherine II was swamped off Scituate. All hands were clinging to their craft when taken off by the fishermen Jackson Arthur.

The Hamburg-American liner Cleveland was forced to heave to in the harbor. At Rockland, Me., the U. S. S. Milwaukee was forced to head for sea when in danger of being driven ashore.

Planes at the airport had a buffeting. One overturned as it tried to take off in the storm, but no one was injured. Others were damaged in landing.

Cat Awaits His Ship

SOLOMON WAITS SHIP'S RETURN

Solomon, feline mascot of the S. S. Mahseer of the Cunard lines, is meowing plaintively about the East Boston docks. Back of his meows lies a story. For Solomon, who was left behind when his ship sailed last week, is no ordinary landlubber.

"A seaman's life in the cat's meow," purred Solomon, "but it's not so good when your ship sails away without you. I signed up to see the world and not through any porthole, either, and here I am stuck here with my boat far out at sea," complained Solomon, ship's cat of the S. S. Mahseer of the Cunard lines.

Solomon is a full grown Maltese, the pet of one of the Mahseer's officers. Last week, when the ship sailed from the East Boston docks, Calcutta bound, Solomon was sunning himself in the yard in front of the pier. At the sound of the ship's whistle, he rushed to the pier, only to find his ship already some distance out on the water.

Wise in the ways of the sea and inclined to be philosophical, Solomon has resigned himself to the inevitable and, knowing his ship will return, has made himself at home at the Cunard docks.

There he was found by an American representative today, resting in the sun and lazily contemplating the activity all around him.

Yard officials have been caring for Solomon, whom they say is very friendly and sociable. They have been keeping him on a diet of boiled liver.

The White Star liner Cedric, from Liverpool and Cobh, docked at Commonwealth Pier this morning. Of her passengers, 170 disembarked here, the others continuing to New York.

Prominent in the last was Miss Irene Harrison, movie star of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, who returns to New York after a two-months vacation in London and Paris. She will resume her work at Hollywood after a brief stay in the metropolis.

John L. Curtis, manager of the Harbin, Manchuria, branch of the National City Bank of New York, returned with his wife and three children, after an absence of seven years. They will remain at Stockbridge a year. All three children were born in the Orient.

Another passenger of note was Jerome Connor of Dublin, sculptor. He continued to New York and will on June 19 assist in the unveiling of a memorial to Elbert Hubbard of Philistine fame, who lost his life in the sinking of the Lusitania. The memorial is the work of Connor.

Michael J. Kelley, Irish travel representative of the International Mercantile Marine, returned in escort of a party of tourists, many of whom were Boston residents. He will sail from New York next Sunday with another party in which Bostonians will be represented.

Liquor and Boat Captured by Guard

Portsmouth, N. H., June 2—After an exciting chase along the coast from Rye Beach through Portsmouth harbor, early today, coast guardsmen seized a motorboat which was abandoned in the harbor, here, and also captured 61 cases of assorted liquors, the crew of the boat are said to have left on the sands of Rye Beach.

Coast guardsmen on patrol first saw some ten men unloading the cargo of the boat on the beach. They summoned help and seized the liquor, which consisted of an assortment of whiskey and champagne. Meanwhile, a patrol boat from the Isle of Shoals station, picked up the trail of the alleged rum-running boat and chased it into Portsmouth harbor where the men abandoned the craft.

According to the coast guard, the boat is registered in the name of Fred Grissels of No. 45 Pearl st., Brooklina.

2 Women See Gambler Put to Death

Carson City, Nev., June 2 (AP)—"Bob" White, Elko gambler, was put to death today in the lethal gas chamber at the Nevada State Prison here. He had been convicted on circumstantial evidence of the murder of Louis Lavell, alleged gambler.

White was taken into the stone chamber he helped to build—an airtight room nine feet long by eight wide and seven high—and strapped into a chair.

He smiled and nodded to persons peering through a window. The 53 witnesses included two women. Before White's chair stood a two-gallon crockery jar containing a quart of sulphuric acid and half a gallon of water.

A string extending into the next room was pulled, opening a container and dropping nearly a dozen one-ounce "eggs" of cyanide of potassium into the acid solution. The deadly gas was generated almost instantly.

White nodded again as the gas started to come from the generator. Then he took a deep breath and leaned back easily. At the third breath his head fell back. Three minutes after he entered the death chamber he apparently was dead.

White had not appeared nervous. He shook hands with the warden and the other two men who helped strap him in the chair.

Miss Margaret Skeeter, Reno, and Miss May E. Kenney, Carson City, were the women witnesses. They were admitted at their own request.

White had declined breakfast. He went to sleep about 11 p. m. and he was awakened about half an hour before the execution.

There was no minister present. White wanted none.

Asked whether he had a last wish, White told the warden:

"You might get me a gas mask. I think I could use that better than anything you could get for me just now."

MEARS VIEWS HIS RIVAL

Lakehurst, N. J., June 2 (US)—John Henry Mears, who shortly will start on his attempt to establish a new time record for round-the-world travel, flew to Lakehurst yesterday to look over his rival.

The Mears plane was piloted by Fred Melchior, who will act as pilot in the globe circling dash. The record at present is held by the Graf Zeppelin, which last year in the Hearst-Zeppelin flight, girded the world in 21 days.

John Henry inspected the Graf carefully and said:

"Well, old girl, you may be fast but something tells me you're going to lose that record."

Miss Davies' Portrait in Place of Honor

London, June 2 (US)—Olive Snell's portrait drawing of Miss Marion Davies occupies the position of honor in the Claridge Gallery, where the artist is holding a "Hollywood exhibition," and has excited the greatest comment.

POLICE SEEK TO LINK 2 SLAYINGS

Reinstein Murder and Strangling of Margaret Urbas Thought Connected

Boston and New York police today sought to link the murder last September of Sammy Reinstein, white slave racketeer, with the strangling of Margaret Urbas, whose body was found in the Harlem river last week.

Miss Urbas was the sweetheart of Eugene Moran, Arnold Rothstein's bodyguard, who was murdered in New Jersey last August by three men, one of whom, James Batto, was an associate of Rothstein.

Batto himself has since been slain, as has Morty Shubert, another of Moran's killers. The third, unidentified, is still alive and, for his protection, it is believed, Miss Urbas may have been slain.

Reinstein's connection with Moran's slayers was established from letters in his effects at the time he was slain at a Back Bay hotel. He had been in hiding for several weeks, fearing the fate which finally overtook him.

Moe Neuman, Philadelphia racketeer, is held at Charles St. jail awaiting trial for the Reinstein slaying. Neuman himself was a target for gangland bullets shortly before his arrest.

Miss Urbas' murder is etched against the background of many gangland murders and in connection with it police wish to interview Danny Ahearn, New York racketeer, who was shot, but escaped death, in Cleveland on the same day Reinstein was slain in Boston. Miss Urbas was in Cleveland at the same time, in hiding. She had been sent to her home there by Moran's slayers.

BEACHED BOAT TOWED TO HUB

A Coast Guard cutter today towed the fishing schooner Mayo First into Boston harbor, after the schooner's captain, Augustine Crulla of Ferry st., Everett, had beached her at Q st., Nantasket.

The Mayo, with 8000 pounds of fish below decks, had sprung a leak near Harding Ledge. Efforts of the crew of three to stop the leak were unavailing and Crulla decided to beach the craft.

Then he called the Coast Guard and the C. G. 151 was dispatched.

Beverage Plant Swept by Fire

Jamestown, N. Y., June 22 (AP)—Fire today swept the Teddy Manufacturing Company plant at Watts Flats, 10 miles west of here, causing a loss estimated at $100,000.

The concern manufactures a beverage composed in part of powdered milk and it is believed the fire started in one of the boxes containing this powder.

AYER'S WIFE IN RENO TO GET DIVORCE

Former Helen Draper, Separated From Taft's Nephew, Goes in Style to Sue

Frankly aiming at a divorce, Mrs. Helen Draper Taft Ayer, wife of Nathaniel Farwell Ayer, Boston mill president, took up residence today in Reno, Nev., according to a news dispatch from that city.

It will be the second divorce for the Boston and Hopedale society woman, niece of the late Governor Eben S. Draper and former wife of Walbridge Smith Taft, New York attorney and nephew of the late ex-President William Howard Taft.

The former Helen Draper arrived in Reno from Santa Barbara, Cal., with a retinue of servants, two riding horses and two costly automobiles.

HE GOES FISHING

Several weeks ago she leased a large house in Reno for a term of months.

Ten years ago, Mrs. Ayer, then Mrs. Taft, arrived in similar fashion and established residence preliminary to her divorce from "Ah Yat" Taft's nephew.

As on her previous visit, she leased a separate house, this time also for her servants.

Ayer, a graduate of Harvard in the class of 1900, director in several banks and president and director of various mills in New England, was in Maine today on a fishing trip. At his Beacon st. home it was said he would return in a few days.

WED SIX YEARS AGO.

He was married to the former Helen Draper on May 24, 1923, at Hopedale, and until the break in their marital relations, the couple lived in California for a greater part of each year.

She is a member of the Vincent and Chilton Clubs, while Ayer is a director of the Harvard Alumni Association and a member of several clubs, including the Eastern and New York Yacht Clubs.

GIRL IN GLIDER CRASH UNHURT

Springfield, June 2—Undaunted by her narrow escape from death at the Bowles airport yesterday, when the glider in which she was flying crashed to the earth from a height of 30 feet, Maude Irving-Tait, local aviatrix, today discussed plans for a flight to Bellefonte, Pa., where she will take part in an aviation meet.

The girl flier, following the crash, was taken to the Springfield hospital, was back at her home, 116 Springfield st., today, apparently none the worse for her crash.

State Highway Inspector William Heaton, after inspecting the wreckage of the glider, said the accident was due to faulty construction of the craft.

2 DEAD, 60 IN 'JAKEY' PERIL

Worcester, June 2—In an effort to save the lives of 60 victims of Jamaica ginger poisoning who are now being treated at the Worcester City Hospital, Dr. Frederick H. Baker, medical examiner, and his assistant, Dr. Hollis Smith, today performed autopsies on the bodies of two men who died from the "jakey" poisoning, early this morning.

The men who died are Terrence O'Brien, 60, of Cherry Valley, and Sedor Waszkoski, 45, of Endicott st. Both were under treatment at the hospital.

The preliminary investigation of the medical examiner indicated that the Jamaica ginger consumed by the men acted directly on their nerve centers.

The cause of the two deaths was given by the medical examiner as alcoholic polyneuritis.

The nerve cells of the victims are being examined in the hope of determining a proper method of treating the other victims. Both the medical examiner and his assistant believe the lives of the 60 men can be saved.

Gold Star Mothers See Paris Churches

Paris, June 2 (US)—The Gold Star mothers in Paris passed a quiet Sunday in the French capital. Most of them went to church during the morning and went sightseeing in the afternoon.

Mrs. Lissette Leidi, who has been in a hospital with an attack of acute arthritis, is expected to rejoin her party within a few days.

FIREBUG HUNT AFTER BLAZE IN CAMBRIDGE

Tenement District and Oil Tank Cars in B. & M. Yards Menaced

A thickly settled tenement district in East Cambridge was menaced early today by flames, believed to have been set, which raced through a building at 312-318 Portland st., destroying it and spreading to an adjoining garage. The loss was estimated at $20,000.

Three alarms were sounded and apparatus was sent from Somerville when it seemed that the flames, fanned by a high wind, would sweep on to the scores of wooden tenements surrounding the building. The fire also spread to the freight yards of the Boston & Maine Railroad, in the rear of Portland st., igniting two cars and threatening more than a score of others. Several of these cars contained oil and other inflammable material, and a curtain of water was thrown about them by firemen.

FLAMES SPREAD RAPIDLY

The building, formerly occupied by the John C. Dow Soap Co., was two and a half stories high and of wooden construction. The fire apparently started on the ground floor and had gained considerable headway when the first apparatus reached the scene.

A second alarm was ordered by Deputy Chief Cutler L. Vose, and when Chief James M. Casey arrived, a few minutes later, the third was sounded. The flames spread through the roof, leaping several feet above the building and sending a shower of sparks that were carried by the winds for several blocks around.

While firemen were busy checking the flames, police were called upon to arrest a Harvard student, who was alleged to have walked off with a fireman's helmet.

The youth, who was charged with larceny, described himself as George P. Huntington of Mount Auburn st. Police say he appropriated the helmet, a spare, from the truck of Ladder 2, and was toting it away to adorn his room when Patrolman John F. Power and Michael Cronin happened along.

They spotted the helmet and took Huntington to the East Cambridge station.

Letters from Readers of the Evening American

Irish Have a Part In Tercentenary

Editor Boston American:

The writer has been harping much during the past seven years on the glory "well deserved" about divers nationalities—comprising "Our Wonderful City." Permit me an inch of space now to contribute something about my ancestors, who came to Boston in 1874 from the cities of Dublin and Killhenny, respectively. Hope this same ancestry will reproduce the ship that came here in 1635 loaded and bulging out with grain to feed the famished Puritans. Here is the contribution of the Irish as part of the Tercentenary fete.

Everything Seems to Be Hard On the "Cop"

Editor Boston American:

It is a hard experience to be a "cop" in Greater Boston these days! Inanimate things seem to have a grudge against the blue coats. Bandits are not only shooting them and getting away with it, but in your paper you give the news that a discus hit a policeman of the Brighton station, felled him to the ground and now his name is on the danger list. Then in another city a propeller struck a cop at the Beverly airport, where he was trying to save life.

Have a heart for cops these days a-swinging their hands in traffic boxes and trying to protect the public from all sorts of hair breadths escapes!

Business Men's School to Last Only Month

Editor Boston American:

Can business be learned in the summer sessions of a business school? This is a question often asked. The only answer to it comes from one attending one or more sessions.

Anyway, summer schools are looked forward to by many men in business, who are seeking new ideas. They are, on this account, becoming established facts.

It is not the formal instruction given that pays for attendance. This is not to be overlooked. But it is largely the interchange of ideas among the students who are mostly engaged in business and have some experience to give in detail.

Harvard business school, in its summer sessions, has reduced the course from six weeks to one month. This has been done in response to requests from many business men all over the country, who think that they can get as much in one month to benefit them as in six weeks. So this school will open in July for one month. Last summer 224 men from 151 different companies located in 38 states, and four from foreign countries attended.

$2,000,000 a Day for Music, and Worth It!

Editor, Boston American:

It was recently said by a Boston speaker before a number of musicians that the American public pays an average of $2,000,000 each day of the year for music.

This means an annual expenditure of $730,000,000. It is an important branch of education and entertainment.

Music is the universal language of mankind through the ages. Nothing draws so well as music. If you go into a department store and some one is grinding out tunes on the piano, even there a crowd of listeners gather. Music should be placed on equal terms with studies in school or college life.

If a person applies to be superintendent of a school or high school principal, he or she should have qualifications in music. Young people today who can translate Wagner or Chopin are more valuable to the public than the young person who has a smattering of French and is flying it before you on many occasions. A musical nation is a contented nation.

Dr. Cadman's "Excursions"

Resented by Minister

Editor, Boston American:

May I trespass once more upon your space and say an additional word about Dr. S. Parkes Cadman?

His reputation has been established as a radio speaker. We all enjoyed more or less his liberal views in his Sunday afternoon radio addresses.

Many of us have often wished that he had been contented to figure in this capacity for some time to come. He has gone recently into fresh pastures and grazes those with his views which many of us have had to resent. His attitude toward the Daughters of the American Revolution is one matter in mind. There are others, of less consequence.

Now the Southern Presbyterian General Assembly has gone on record against his opinions, expressed over the radio.

Every one must know that addresses over the radio should be a general outlook without partisanship. The field is wide for this. The need is urgent. We regret to hear any one expressing his personal opinions in a way to be irritating.

A MINISTER.

An Irishman Sets an Englishman Right

Editor, Boston American:

I'd like to set that Englishman right about the Irish. He spoke at one of the meetings of the Unitarians.

The Irish forgive easily, perhaps they forgive too easily. They never forget and perhaps it would be for their good if they learned to forget.

They are more chivalrous than many of the nations in Europe and more chaste than any. In common with the rest of the earth, they believe that man is not worth much, unless he will die for his ideals.

In all political relations, it is said, that an Irishman interprets patriotism to mean his love for Ireland. He cannot forget this. If you knew him well, you would not want him to forget this relation. If he gets an ideal in his head, he will die for it. Let us get the right light upon the Irish and we will want no other light, believe me!

PATRICK NOONAN.

Newspapers Credited for Better Informed Youth

Editor, Boston American:

Some educators in Boston are claiming that the youth of today has more general information at his command and the power of initiative than the youth of the past generation.

Why should it not be so? The youth of today has information thrown at him. He has so many opportunities to pick up general information. The newspapers are today at a different angle than 50 years ago.

In my boyhood, they had no Sunday editions of the newspaper to wade through. I remember when the New York Herald first began the Sunday edition. The modern newspaper is the great contributor to general information. There is no question about that.

In my youth we never clamored for the newspapers. They were not interesting to any child's mind. This has now changed. A child wants the newspaper today and asks for it, because there is something in it that appeals to a child's mind.

A Boston newspaper some time ago omitted for an interval the funny pictures. It had to take them up again. Because the newspaper of today is for all ages. This means general information. It inspires initiative. To be short, it is the newspapers that make the children of this generation wiser than the children of the past generation, as far as general information is given.

AN OLD CODGER.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

Editor Boston American:

I would like to get the opinions of your readers upon one matter of vital interest to me and other patrons of restaurants in New England cities.

Do they think that jazz music played during meals in some restaurants gives vim to the appetite? Why is it that some of these places furnish it as if it were acceptable to every hungry person?

My idea of a restaurant is one where we can eat our meals without a jazz band. I may be a prude, but I like good music when my meal is finished and it is no great help to me to have food pass into me to the tune of "Why Did Nellie Leave Her Home?"

Good Figures

are most essential in the summer—for you have no enveloping fur coat to conceal those bulky lines. The best way to attain this perfection is to wear the reducing corset which is in such demand at W. H. Phelps. It reduces those extra pounds at the hips and diaphragm and is a new idea. The more one tests it has undergone proves its worth. Get your order in early, so that you may enjoy its wonderful slenderizing with your first summer frock. It is cool, porous, comfortable, and will be made to order, repaired and altered free as you reduce. Why diet 15 days when you can wear this corset today, and alter your clothes tomorrow. Mere words cannot show you what it will do! You must try it on. Write for further detail, or call at W. H. Phelps & Co., 28 Tremont St., Hub. 2490.

Rain! Rain! Go or Stay

You can't hurt the beauty of the smart little miss who has had an early permanent by the deft hands of Lillian Cunningham. She uses only the best materials, and when she gives you a Eugene wave—although she charges you but $10—you can be sure that you are getting the genuine Eugene sachets. Miss Cunningham has been in the hairdressing business for over 20 years, and realizing that all hair is not alike, has provided a choice of three other methods besides the Eugene—Frederics, Bonat, Nestle, on which her price is the same—$10. If your hair is turning grey—or becoming thin, just speak to Miss Cunningham. She is very successful in restoration work. 561 Boylston St., Tel. Back Bay 9069.

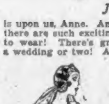
June's Magic Spell

is upon us, Anne. And how can we think of prosaic things when there are such exciting things to do—and such enchanting frocks to wear! There's graduation—that beloved "Prom"—and even a wedding or two! And from a modern sports outfit to a stately wedding gown you'll find Scott Furriers, New England's largest fur establishment, 69 Summer St., is a mighty good place to solve all "what-to-wear" problems that the magic month of June brings. There has been many a pursed lip over the Graduation Gown for little sister who has grown so big. Shall it have lace? Sleeves? Or without? And there has been many a furrowed brow over that swagger sport outfit. Shall it be an ensemble with a sleeveless dress, and a long-sleeved coat? Whatever your decision may be you'll find that the Scott Furriers' Salon is prepared for them all with dresses that range from $5.95 up to $29.50. A special sale of fur scarfs is also in progress, with beautiful scarfs at $19.50, $25, $35 and up to $175. On dresses, too, as well as furs, you are privileged to choose any one of the Three-Scott-Ways of Buying, charge account, or the Scott Unique Fur Club—the only one in New England. And "lest we forget" the destructive moth, bring in, or send in your fur coat to Scott Furriers' storage vaults for safety. Call Lib. 8216. Scott Furriers, New England stores are located at 69 Summer St., Boston; 309 Westminster St., Providence, and 51 Pratt St., Hartford.



Perfumed Fingertips!

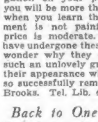
MMH! But that sounds romantic, Anne — romantic and utterly feminine, in perfect keeping with the charming styles and manners we modern maidens are affecting. For Coty's new Perfumed Manicure Set makes it possible to have tapered and tinted finger tips exuding the faint, exotic perfume of Coty. Instead of the annoying chemicals we've been wafting from freshly manicured nails. It is attractively packaged, and the generous sized bottles are arranged in a removable bakelite tray. So often a fresh manicure speaks so plainly and unpleasantly for itself that some fastidious persons forego the lustre of polished nails because of it, but with Coty's new Perfumed Manicure Set all these chemical odors have been abolished, and instead—effective oils and essentials, enchantingly perfumed. With these preparations Coty has made home manicuring the simplest task. After shaping your nails with the fine steel file included, you have a wonderful Solvent for removing all traces of former polish. A Cuticle Physicians have recommended this wonderful face bath to pa- Remover that is unsurpassed for eradicating nicotine and other stains. A marvelous Liquid Polish—crystal clear, and in three shades. There is also a nail white, cuticle oil and powder which are sure to make charming gifts to your week-end hostess—your Sweet Girl Graduate—or to any of your friends who adore the beautiful and delight in the smartest. They are priced at $3, $4 and $5 in Filene's Toiletries Shop, street floor.

Superfluous Hair

It is well known that both the medical profession and beauty specialists have endorsed the electric needle as a standard and safe method of removing an unwanted hair growth so that it will never return again. Also, the skin is not injured or scarred, which is quite a deciding factor in itself. James Brooks, electric needle specialist at 100 Boylston St., will be pleased to advise you as to your own case without any obligation on your part. I know you will be more than interested when you learn that the treatment is not painful, and the price is moderate. Those who have undergone these treatments wonder why they ever allowed such an unlovely growth to mar their appearance when it can be so successfully removed. James Brooks. Tel. Lib. 4466.

Back to One Dollar!

What news could be more welcome than this One Dollar Price for cleansing? By special arrangement the Shopper's Cleaning Shop has returned to their original price of $1 for cleansing and pressing all sorts of coats and dresses—giving the same excellent service that has made this convenient cleansing shop so popular. Once you have had one or two soiled frocks cleaned here, and realize the prompt and splendid service you receive, I'm sure you will become a steady caller. This price of $1 covers coats, raincoats, dresses of all kinds—pleated or plain, and they not only remove every smudge but press them to perfection, and revive their colors. Dyeing is a specialty at $2.85. The Shopper's Cleaning Shop, 8 Winter St., Rm. 702.



June Brings Rings

—slender shining circles for the lovely bride to wear forever! But the 1930 June bride does not have to watch her wedding ring go out of style, as fashion changes as brides of other years have done. For the Bernier Service Shop has created a new wedding ring, with a reversible surface, and by a little lock, you can turn up a diamond surface for evening wear, and an engraved, or plain surface for daytime. It is a marvelous idea, and is becoming very popular, for it is really two rings in one. If you are wearing a wide, old-fashioned wedding band, why not take it to Bernier and let him remodel it. He does most successful work, and still retains the original wedding ring. The Bernier Service Shop does jewelry engraving, remodeling and repairing of all kinds. 125 Tremont St., Rm. 401, Tel. Han. 1644.

Fair Weather Waves

—the kind that you give yourself with the family curling tongs —didn't hold their beauty very long last week, when the drenching rain took the curl out of every ripple and ringlet that wasn't a permanent one—that stands by you in all sorts of weather. These are the kind that Gilchrist's Beauty Shop gives, and their operators, using the Frederics Method, have won all sorts of praise with the soft, natural-looking waves they give. If you long for a wide, deep wave or a closer, curlier one, their art of winding assures either kind. The price, including shampoo and setting wave, is $10. Now, surely your skin, too, must need preparation for the summer, and a Komplex Facial, given by Gilchrist's operators, will cleanse all the imbedded blackheads, tighten the pores, and satinize your skin. They are $2. Gilchrist's Beauty Shop, 3rd floor, Lib. 9700.

All Golden Crowns

are not worn by princesses, Anne! There are crowns of golden hair worn by the smart modern maidens who know the secret of keeping the gold in the locks by using Flonor—Lesquendieu's magic hair brightener. This liquid does not tint the hair, nor bleach it. It simply brightens it unbelievably—brings out all the hidden lights that have become dulled—gives it the warmth and lustre of burnished gold! It comes in two sizes, $2.50 and $1.50, and lasts for months, for you just use a tiny bit on a piece of cotton, after you've shampooed your hair with Lesquendieu's Powdered Egg Shampoo. This shampoo has all the qualities of a real egg shampoo, and makes the hair soft and fluffy with a glorious sheen. It is 25 cents a package, and you can get them both in Conrad's Toilet Goods Section (street floor).

Goodnight, My Anne, and dream sweet dreams of princesses with golden hair, and flower-scented finger-tips. Of curls that summer rains put in. Of skin that vies with the wild rose petal. Of a Prince Charming that will bring a strange wedding ring—and of summer frocks that glorify—for that's my story this week.

Devotedly yours,

Priscilla

NEWS, VIEWS AND GOSSIP OF SOCIETY IN AND ABOUT GREATER BOSTON

Mrs. Peabody Is Hostess at Tea

Entertains Hundreds Who Saw Groton-St. Mark's Annual Baseball Game

NOT ALL OF SOCIETY turned out for the Horse Shows and Memorial Day exercises which were held around town, for the young crowd poured into Groton for the Groton-St. Mark's baseball game until the little town looked as though a Harvard-Yale game was in progress. Debs, sub-debs, post-debs with their Harvard friends and Groton and St. Mark's Alumni swarmed all over the place; it was one of the most successful social events of the early season.

MRS. ENDICOTT PEABODY was hostess for tea to hundreds of the fair visitors and their escorts and it was like a brilliant reception. On the sacred grounds of the Groton field we saw a number of the next season's buds blooming in gay summer costume, among them Harriet Morse, Cerita Bartlett, Ann Dick, Beatrice de Menocal, Eliza Bowditch, daughter of Mrs. F. Sohier Welch, who is going to depart soon for a ranch in the West, with Joan Lindsley, daughter of Mr. Halstead Lindsley, and Sally Ives, daughter of the Oscar Ives of Salem, and Lorna Livermore.

MR. AND MRS. LARZ ANDERSON were the guests of their relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Frederic M. Gardiner of Beverly Farms, at the launching of Mr. Gardiner's schooner Evanthia II at Lawson's yard at Dorchester. Miss Polly Gardiner, daughter of the house, broke the traditional quart on her bow. Miss Isabel, another daughter, christened the tender with a bottle of Grade A.

The Dingley will lay off Marblehead on Sunday and members may be taken on by launch, leaving at 8:30 for Boston, where others may board her. The Dingley will follow the races each day and return to Newport for the night. Members have until June 4 to make reservations.

MRS. GEORGE COPP WARREN, chairman of the Preservation Committee of the U. S. Daughters of 1812, entertained at tea on Thursday at the Women's City Club, when plans were arranged for the society's headquarters at the Hotel Bellevue, Beacon st, where visiting members may meet and receive information during the month of the celebration. For July the Massachusetts State president, Mrs. Edward Harold Crosby, Mrs. Henry A. Fiske and Miss Hattie B. Ward, assisted by other members, will be in attendance.

Margery Richardson to Accompany Father on Trip to Europe

MR. FREDERICK W. L. RICHARDSON and his daughter, Miss Margery, are sailing abroad for the summer. They will visit Mr. Richardson's son, Arthur, who married Hope Livermore, granddaughter of Mrs. Oliver Ieslin. Mr. Richardson is one of Boston's prominent architects and paints water colors as an avocation. He will do a bit of sketching while in the south of France. Mr. Arthur Richardson is also a painter, having had the honor of having one of his pictures hung in the Beaux Arts Galleries. His clever wife conducts a smart bookshop in Paris.

THE JOHN F. AMESES ARE going abroad on the 26th of June to spend some time in the shooting country of Norway.

Tercentenary Fete in Newton This Week

The second big event in Newton's five-month celebration of the 300th anniversary of the city and the Massachusetts Bay Colony will be held Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights at the Newton Center playground on Homer st., when "Newton, the City Beautiful," a pageant-drama, will be staged.

More than $15,000 has already been spent by the city to prepare the elaborate event, with a miniature railway, a brook to represent the Charles river, and little buildings among the properties employed in presenting the story of the history of Newton.

Postpone Air Stunts at Beverly

The third day of the dedication of Beverly airport was postponed late yesterday because of the high wind, it was announced by Harland F. Banks, manager of the meet.

Instead of cancelling the aerial program scheduled for the day, Banks transferred the entire program until next Sunday.

Bomb dropping, stunt flying, balloon bursting, dead stick landings and speed races will complete the program.

In New Hamilton Home

MRS. RICHARD HUBBARD (Betty Moulton) and handsome husband, Dick Hubbard, are settled in their new home at Hamilton. They gave a large dinner party the other evening as a sort of house-warming. Mrs. Hubbard as Miss Moulton, was a prominent member of the Vincent Club.

College Cast Gives Play

A large audience saw the students of Regis College, Weston, present the "Taming of the Shrew" at their natural amphitheater on the campus yesterday afternoon.

One of the outstanding features of the program was a dance on horseback by 12 students as heralds. To the strains of music from an orchestra hidden in the greens offstage, the girls gave an exhibition of horsemanship by putting their mounts through a difficult series of dance movements.

The heralds were the Misses Alice Dineen, Esther Donohoe, Margaret Donovan, Madeline Edie, Veronica Feeney, Marion Fuir, Ruth Hodges, Frances Lauhner, Mary McBride, Catherine Mutch, Julia Saunders and Margaret Sheridan. Mary F. Rooney was the director of the presentation, with Josephine Cogan instructor of dancing.

Miss Mary Louise Rogers of Newton, as Katherina, and Miss Helen Cahill of Newton, as Petruchio, won much applause in their portrayals of the leading female and male roles. The chief comic character, Miss Genevieve Nelon of Chelsea, as Grumio; Miss Dorothy Gilbride of Jamaica Plain, as Bianca; Miss Mary Smiddy of Framingham, as Lucentio; Miss Mary Thornton of Haverhill, as Lucentio, and Miss Helen Halloran of Lowell, as Baptista, also played their parts with excellence.

Members of the freshman class formed the group for chorus singing, with Miss Yolande Arcand of Newton the soloist. The dancers were from the sophomore and junior classes with over 100 students taking part in the performance.

In connection with the Massachusetts Tercentenary year, the Boston Evening American is publishing daily photographs of interesting antiques. Owners of genuine antiques, particularly of Colonial or early American origin or of historic association, are invited to forward photographs and records for publication. If a photograph is not available, the American will send a cameraman to photograph the antique, providing the owner lives in Greater Boston. Address the Antique Editor, 3 Winthrop sq., Boston.

Clubwomen Leave for Denver

Bay State Delegates to Press Drive to Make Mrs. Poole First Vice-President

By NANCY BREWSTER

"On to Denver."

About 100 prominent Massachusetts clubwomen leave this afternoon for the West to officially represent the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs at the biennial convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

And about as many more will be on hand at various stations to wave good-bys to club sisters and remind the travelers that the Bay State is solidly behind Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole for first vice president of the General Federation.

A campaign committee, led by Mrs. Frederick Glazier Smith of Somerville, will also go to Denver especially tuned to songs and cheers, and election shouts all in favor of the Brockton clubwoman whose name is known from coast to coast.

HEADS DELEGATION

Mrs. Carl L. Schrader, elected president of the State Federation last month, heads the brilliant delegation which includes Mrs. Azel A. Packard, retired president, whose directorship from this state in the General Federation will be confirmed at the seat of the convention; Mrs. Arthur Owens Potter, Mrs. Thomas J. Walker, Mrs. Henry W. Hildreth, Mrs. Charles L. Fuller, Mrs. Walter T. Spencer, Mrs. Frederick W. Prescott, Miss Carolyn J. Peck, Mrs. Edwin L. Price, Mrs. Maude Sumner, Mrs. Frank H. While many are going by train, another group plans a motor trip to the West. Such a group will go from the Cantabrigia Club of Cambridge.

MARKS ANNIVERSARY

At any rate, the entire Bay State delegation will be in full force when Mrs. John D. Sippel, General Federation president, presses for the State Federation meeting at Swampscott last month, raps for order at the luncheon next Thursday evening in the Municipal Auditorium, where all the sessions will be held. Despite the pre-convention executive sessions and conferences, the convention officially opens Thursday, and from that moment on "Woman's Service as Citizen" will be stressed in song and word.

The biennial convention will mark the 40th anniversary of the founding of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, the greatest body of organized women in the world, a body of two and half million home-makers throughout the land. A program of more than passing feature and pleasure will be presented, climaxed by the symposium offered by past presidents, who will speak on the subject "Backward Glimpses of Forty Years." Those past presidents who are still living are all expected to be present, and among them we find such stellar lights as Mrs. Charles H. Denison of Duluth, Mrs. Philip North Moore of St. Louis, Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker of Texas, Mrs. Henry Schlah Cowles of Los Angeles, Mrs. Thomas G. Winter of Pasadena and Mrs. John D. Sherman of Denver.

Vacation Problems Will Be Discussed at Lecture on Thursday

Parents, children and vacations and what to do about all three at the same time! Miss Sybil Foster of the Massachusetts Society for Mental Hygiene, will talk on the parent-child relationship during the vacation period at the Civic Information Center, 87 Beacon st., next Thursday, at 2:30 p. m., under the auspices of the bureau.

Miss Foster, with her usual patience and energies doubtless have been taxed to the utmost by such young problems as they themselves when junior is not at school and wants to "go places," and for the benefit of enlisting mates Miss Foster will present various "do's and don'ts" on the subject.

Mrs. Louisa P. Skilton, director of the center, announces this as the last of the series of lectures for the season, but reminds that the center is open during the warm weather months, except on Saturdays, for consultant service.

"Weaving the Rug of Finance" will be discussed by Dr. Davis R. Dewey, professor of economics and banking at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, a practical subject for women engaged in practical finance.

Congresswoman Due to Attend Sessions of Lynn Auxiliary

When the American Legion Auxiliary opens its three-day convention at Swampscott, June 19, 20 and 21, those in attendance will anticipate the appearances of Congresswoman Edith Nourse Rogers, who is expected to be a guest of the Massachusetts women legionaires.

Congresswoman Rogers will especially witness the exhibition of Rogers cadets, named in her honor, which with cadets from Suffolk County, the Graves cadets of Marlboro, the Fitzgerald cadets of Lowell, will participate with the Malden color team, now drilling weekly for the great event.

Decorative Ideas at Back of Evening Gowns

From Paris Bureau, Boston Evening American.

Paris, June 2

UNUSUALLY INTERESTING is this scarf plan by Paquin. It is of chiffon. Note the two large bows. These with crystal and strass embroidery are sole trimmings on this white satin wrap. (Sketched in Paris.)

HOWEVER MUCH the evening frock may be to the fore, it is individually still very backward. Which is just to tell you that many smart frocks still display most of their charms and originality of cut and design to the back of the garment. Decolletages may be quite plain and demure in front, but once they turn the corner around the shoulders, they lose all their inhibitions and give vent to all sorts of astonishing intricacies of cut and treatment.

Thus so far as evening clothes are concerned, there are no two backs alike, however uniform the rest of the silhouette may be. The skirt is given various treatments of spiral effects, puffs and panniers or panels ending in short trains all placed to the side back of the gown and maintaining a simplicity of detail for the front.

It certainly cannot be said of the present day evening frock that it is all front and no back, however low its back decolletage may be.

The wrap becomes shorter and shorter and in some cases even shrinks to a shoulder scarf size while maintaining all its interest and charm. Such a scarf is the one sketched here and created by Paquin for many important clients.

The fabric is white satin, very heavy and lustrous, and both sides of the fabric is employed. Two large bows and motifs in crystal and strass embroidery are the sole trimming. The scarf is also made in chiffon or crepe in colors to complement a certain frock and should prove itself a most pleasing and useful accessory.

The evening gown is a creation of the same house. It is of dahlia colored crepe marocain, and all the detail is found to the back of the frock.

Especially intriguing is the decolletage in diagonal effect, passing from one shoulder down to the opposite hip. The other side of the bodice is caught over in a point. A foundation of flesh chiffon is seen through the open part at the lower left side.

The skirt wraps gracefully around and falls in a rippling line from the left hip, trailing in a short pointed train. Inset godets are employed to create the circular ripple along the edge.

DAHLIA COLORED crepe morocain is used in this evening gown from the house of Paquin. All the detail is found to the back of the frock. Note the graceful wrapping of the skirt. (Sketched in Paris.)

Pops Concert for Visitors

A remarkably impressive ceremonial attended the special concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra last night. Crowding the hall for the occasion, which was the official opening of the Massachusetts Bay Colony Tercentenary, were the guests of the Commonwealth. The honored guests were the Centennial Legion, composed of military organizations from the Thirteen Original States.

Addresses of welcome were delivered in behalf of the Commonwealth by Governor Allen, and for the city by Thomas A. Mullen, member of the city industrial commission, in the absence of Mayor Curley. The musical program, in which 95 members of the orchestra participated, was conducted by Arthur Fiedler. The concert was a gift of the trustees of the orchestra to the Commonwealth as its tercentenary contribution.

The program began with Revere's "Second Connecticut Regiment" march, and ended with Victor Herbert's "American Fantasie," Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever" added to the patriotic coloring, while the program itself was printed in red, white and blue.

The audience was very enthusiastic.

Peppy Flakes Versatile

A most delicious summer food are the peppy bran flakes, that come to you fresh and crisp in their inner-sealed bag. Made of whole wheat, these pep bran flakes are rich in nutriment, yet are light enough to make the ideal hot-weather food.

They have taken their place as one of the staple ready-to-eat breakfast cereals, ideal too for the children's noon time lunch, and also good for grownups to eat before going to bed—and that means me.

Try these peppy flakes with milk and honey, in place of milk and sugar and then thank me. You'll have the satisfaction of knowing that you're eating something that's as good for you as it is delicious to your palate.

Chicken Pudding Wins Martha Lee's Weekly Prize

A Waltham woman's recipe for a delicious chicken pudding was awarded the weekly prize given by Martha Lee. Photos show the pudding being prepared and being placed in the oven.

Chicken Pudding Winner of Weekly Prize

Chicken makes the ideal summer Sunday dinner and we are sure that you'll be interested in this "Chicken Pudding," which wins the $5 weekly recipe prize for Mrs. Arthur D. Fossett, Pine Hill Circle, Waltham, Mass. It makes it possible to serve chicken economically since the batter carries the chicken flavor over a considerable quantity of material. You can serve 8 to 10 people from this recipe. For the small family, we'd suggest halving it.

CHICKEN PUDDING

INGREDIENTS:
3 medium sized chickens
1 small onion
2 stalks celery
2 sprigs parsley
1 quart water
1 tsp. Worcester Salt
¼ tsp. Slade's Pepper

BATTER:
2 cups Hood's Milk
2 Hood's Eggs
2 cups Cerevita Flour
2 tsp. Royal Baking Powder
½ tsp. Worcester Salt
1 tbsp. Hood's Melted Butter

SAUCE
1 cup Hood's Milk
1 cup chicken broth
1 tbsp. Cerevita Flour
1 tbsp. Hood's butter
1 tbsp. minced parsley, Worcester Salt and Slade's Pepper

Cut each chicken in six pieces and cover with the water, adding the onion, celery and parsley. Simmer until tender and broth reduced about one-half. Remove the chicken, separate the meat from the bones and place in a deep, well buttered baking dish. Sift together the dry ingredients for the batter; add the eggs, the milk and the melted butter. Beat thoroughly together, pour over the chicken, and bake in a rather hot oven until brown. Thicken the chicken broth with the flour and butter rubbed to a paste. Pour milk into broth, and bring to the boiling-point, add the parsley and serve in a sauce bowl with the pudding.

Do's, Don'ts for Salad

Chill every ingredient that's going into your salad.

Wash salad greens and dry them, either with a clean towel or by shaking in a bag until all the water has been extracted.

Don't place lettuce directly on the ice. It causes rust. Place the bag containing the lettuce on a plate or a saucer in the refrigerator.

Cut meat, fish, dates, lettuce, etc, for salads with the kitchen scissors. It makes more uniform pieces and adds to the attractiveness of the salad.

Fruits and vegetables for salads should be well drained and mixed with the dressing only just before serving. If they stand in the dressing, they will become watery, and the salad wilteres.

Chicken, lobster and other shell fish can be mixed with mayonnaise in advance of using.

In preparing your salad, arrange the leaves so that the servings can be removed individually without spoiling the appearance of the whole salad.

Hard boiled eggs put through a ricer make an attractive garnish for salads, and so do thin strips of pimiento, stuffed olives, green peppers, and chopped nuts.

"Crisp and cool" should be the keynote of all salads.

Fall Classes Fill Fast

I hate to seem to be egging you on for early enrollments in our fall cooking classes, but remembering the 420 who were disappointed in securing admittance to our spring classes and realizing that the same condition is going to prevail next fall, I do want to suggest that if you want to take advantage of the fall lessons, send in your enrollment now.

The classes next fall will be held, as this year, on Tuesday evenings from 6:30 to 8:15, and Wednesday afternoons from 2 to 4.

While I can't say this with certainty now, the probability is very strong that after the next fall classes, we will be unable to enroll anyone who has already completed two courses. Our list of applicants so greatly exceeds our seating capacity that it seems only fair to widen our sphere of helpfulness by making room for scores who heretofore have been unable to secure admission. This is, however, merely an advance suggestion—not a positive fact as yet.

Remember there is no charge for these cooking lessons.

Lee Diplomas in Cookery

It will be a brave husband who'll dare to murmur about the pies that mother used to make, if friend wife is one of the graduates from the Martha Lee Cooking School Tuesday evening and Wednesday afternoon.

Besides the award of the diplomas to the Brides and Business Girls' Class Tuesday evening at 6:30 an dthe Homemakers' School Wednesday at 2 there'll be refreshments of ice cream from the H. P. Hood Company and cake from the Berwick Cake Company and moving pictures.

There'll be gifts, too, for fortunate graduates, which will include 10 cases of Moxie through the courtesy of Mr. Frank Archer, Sr., president of the Moxie Company of America; two dozen assorted packages of La Choy Chinese Food Products, Campfire Marshmallows and Campfire Mallo-Whip from the Campfire Company; six Connolly Ovens, from Mr. J. F. Connolly of the Connolly Stamping Company, and 50 pounds of Babat-ett Cheese in assorted packages.

No diploma will be awarded to anyone already having earned one, although we are very glad indeed to have you enroll for a place in our classes. Or to come as a visitor.

Visitors are welcomed at these graduation exercises.

CRAB AND CUCUMBER BOATS

One of the most attractive, delicious and easy to make summer salads is Crab and Cucumber Boats. To prepare them, cut cucumbers into halves, lengthwise, and trim into boat shape. Remove the insides, leaving thin walls. Chop the cucumber filling and to each cupful add a small can of Japanese crab meat, separated into flakes, and sufficient mayonnaise to hold together. Fill the cucumber cases and serve on a bed of shredded lettuce.

LET A SALT BATH LIMBER YOU UP!

After a glorious afternoon on the golf course or your daily activities about the house you will find a salt bath joyously refreshing. It relieves and relaxes tired nerves and muscles.

A salt bath is nature's best antiseptic and tonic. It cleanses the skin of all impurities—limbers up the muscles, and gives vigor.

There is no Substitute for Salt

Salt is as essential to digestion as it is necessary to bring out the best flavor in foods.

You know "It takes the best to make the Best," so insist upon Ivory Salt. Your grocer has it in the convenient orange carton with the easy pouring spout.

Just pour into your regular bath a carton of Ivory Salt, (the very same salt you use for table and cooking) reserving a few handfuls for massaging the muscles and feet. If you prefer a shower, wet the skin and rub Ivory Salt all over the body. In either case rinse the salt away with clean water before stepping from the tub.

Take a salt bath every day—you will be surprised how much better you will look and feel in a short time.

BIG BUILDING MEN

We were looking for George Mason, iron worker and champion hot rivet slinger. George gained brief fame awhile ago posing atop a skyscraper for a "nonchalant" cigarette ad. George lives in Malden and travels all around the country putting up big buildings. Our scout, who keeps tab on such celebrities, informed us that he had just finished on the big job at 75 Federal st. and that he was engaged on the building in process of construction in Tremont st., adjacent to the Tremont theater.

It was noon. We found George and his pal, Jimmy Moore, taking a siesta in an alley, at the rear of the steel structure. They had just finished a game of craps a few of the building gang were still rolling the bones. "Come seven" . . . arrived this column. We went right to business:

"Are you the Mr. Mason of nonchalant cigarette fame?" we asked.

George hedged a moment at the query and answered warily: "Why?"

We told him. Then George explained:

"Yer see, I been expectin' a guy what's been chasing me to take a correspondence course . . . all the time there's a mob of fellers wantin' to sell me something or other. First, I thought you was one of them. They always come around at noon time on pay day. They know we fellers make pretty good money when we are workin', and they are always settin' to back for some. Well, anyway, it's all right . . . what do yer want to know?"

At this crisis up stepped James Moore, George's pal, pound box of chocolates in hand.

"Have a sweet," said he by way of introduction. We accepted. George took one.

SEE-SAWING IN THE AIR

"How does it feel to be up there in the air swinging on steel beams?" we asked. "Do you ever get seasick or scared?"

"Aw! There's nothin' to it! Just like any other regular job when yer get used to it," he replied. George went on: "Once in a while a guy gets killed or knocked off—but that's all in the game. One dropped last week on this job—on the Federal st. job we had a couple of accidents, too."

"What are the average casualties?" we inquired again. At this quiz George's pal popped in as building trades statistician.

"Average is one fatality to 700 workers per year," said Jimmy. "Insurance rates for us fellers is pretty high."

"How about wages—you fellows make pretty good money, don't you?"

The boys were prosperity conscious. Jimmy raised his chest a little. "Yeah. We do pretty well. Twelve bucks a day—double pay for overtime. Maybe average 70 bucks a week on a good job. I'm buyin' a new auto—gotta swell radio, too! We got a strong union organization, yer know."

"Any scabs ever make the job?" we asked.

"Say!" George said confidentially, "a scab's life wouldn't be worth a nickel with flyin' rivets around."

WHITE COLLAR GUYS

Switching the subject back to economics, we asked Messrs. George and James how they regarded their position socially with white collar workers—clerks, salesmen and such-like who didn't make anywhere near as much money as they do? George pointed to the species referred to. They were gazing out of nearby office windows at the craps game in progress.

"Say," he said, "I got better clothes than they get . . . at home."

The whistle blew. We moved down the alley.

"Ain't yer goin' to take our pitcher? Come around next week and we'll be puttin up the flag," invited George.

CANNON DEFIES SENATE PROBE

Washington, June 2 (AP)—Bishop James Cannon, Jr., has challenged the authority of the Senate lobby committee to inquire into his expenditures as leader of the anti-Smith fight in Virginia.

The committee has called Cannon to appear tomorrow to explain the expenditures of $48,300, part of a fund of $65,300 contributed to the Anti-Saloon campaign in 1928 by E. C. Jameson, New York insurance executive. The $48,300 was not accounted for under the corrupt practice law.

Cannon's defiance, set forth in a formal statement, indicated a lively session tomorrow.

"On my return to Washington this week, I examined the text of the federal corrupt practices act to verify my statement that a person or a committee operating in only one State is not required to make any report.

"Not only is such report not required, but upon a thorough examination of all the reports in the office of the clerk of the House, I found that it has never been customary for State committees — Democratic, Republican, or otherwise—to make such reports."

Man Pays $1000 for 3 Cents Worth of Glass as 'Gems'

Seven pieces of glass which could easily be held in the palm of one's hand cost Solomon Levine of 241 Bryant street, Malden, $1000, according to a police report today. Two men sold him the glass as diamonds stolen in Russia, smuggled here and worth $3000.

Levine had them "appraised" and found they were less than three cents.

MAN KIDNAPED IN SYNAGOGUE

Kansas City, June 2 (AP)—Police today vainly sought more details of the reputed kidnaping of a young unidentified Hebrew, declared by a Negro janitor to have been dragged by six men from the Beth Hamidrash Hagodol Temple, where he had sought sanctuary.

Harry Chandler, the janitor, last night reported that the victim, hatless, coatless and terror-stricken, ran into the synagogue, closely pursued by six men.

WHY WE GIVE ELECTRICAL ADVICE

IN these advertisements we are telling you how we have "looked at ourselves through our customers' eyes." This is the eighth of a series of ten advertisements telling you what we have found. Here we will answer the question, "Does the Company Give Electrical Advice to Customers Building or Rebuilding Homes, Stores, and Offices Buildings?" The next advertisement will appear in two weeks.

Adequate illumination in home, office, store or factory, accomplishes two major results. It enables our customers to obtain greater value from the electric service provided for their use—and permits us to supply electricity more economically, as current consumption increases.

We believe that a customer who desires advice concerning the best method of adequately illuminating his building should be able to secure this information impartially. As we are not in the contracting business, do no wiring, but act solely in an advisory capacity, we feel that we may assume this responsibility in the best interests of our customers.

Therefore, we maintain a group of Illuminating Engineers who will plan and specify adequate lighting arrangements for your home, office, store or factory. Our Home Service Division, a group of home economic specialists, is also available to assist you in making your home lighting more decorative, and in getting the greatest value from your electricity in cooking, cleaning, refrigeration, and other ways. There is no charge nor obligation for any of these services.

'BORN RECKLESS' ON KEITH SCREEN RANKS HIGH IN UNDERWORLD FILMS

HONORS GO TO EDMUND LOWE

By HARRIS MORGAN

DONALD HENDERSON CLARKE, author of "Louis Beretti," on which the Keith film, "Born Reckless," is based, declares that he is entirely satisfied with the picture, despite the fact that several important changes have been made in adapting the story to screen. If Mr. Clarke is content, audiences can hardly complain for "Born Reckless" is the best gangster picture since "Underworld."

UNDER JOHN FORD'S deft direction, it becomes mightily exciting even to the final shot of two East Side gunmen blasting away at each other. Underworld films should move with lightning speed, and this one does. It never hesitates, it never lags, it never stops to assess that its hero intends to become a model citizen. From first to last Louis Beretti is the great gunman. And this is precisely the way Edmund Lowe plays the role, changing his style of acting to suit this tight-lipped, quick fingered gentleman of the East Side gangs.

Edmund Lowe

SECONDING Mr. Lowe, is Lee Tracy, that most polished actor, and Warren Hymer. William Harrigan and Paul Page are also on hand. Of the two women in this film, Marguerite Churchill easily outranks Catherine Dale Owen.

AS THE STORY unreels, the audience has the uneasy feeling that Mr. Lowe is going to be one of all screen gangsters, that he will reform, go straight, and generally involve himself in a muddle of sentimentality. Actually, nothing of the sort happens. The gangster goes off to war unwillingly. He returns to become a speakeasy proprietor.

THIS PICTURE possessed an excellent plot to begin with. It benefits greatly by the work of its able actors. It is still further bettered by the direction of John Ford, famous for "The Black Watch" and "Men Without Women." Ford sends his scenes shooting along staccato-fashion; he rumors the war in a few swift shots. He never lets the plot lag, he never allows the audience time to catch its breath.

AT EVERY TIME when an ordinary film would weaken, "Born Reckless" gains strength. It has not a thing in common with the usual "crooks and cops" melodrama; in fact, it is no real that it is hardly melodrama at all. And that last scene of all, when the Big Shot drops his whiskey glass, and Joe and Louis Beretti bleed it out to the death, almost elbow to elbow, as gun smoke rises and swinging doors sway and shake, is a fitting conclusion to a very fine film.

MARIAN NIXON TO BE STARRED IN STORY BY WILLIAMS

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

LOS ANGELES, June 2—Marian Nixon, who was robbed so ruthlessly on the East going Chief, has gotten herself together sufficiently to talk story at the Warner Brothers' studio. She will be starred in "The Romance of the Rails" by Ben Ames Williams, with James Hall and Grant Withers as her leading men. Here is one jewel robbery that was not planned by a press agent.

Marian, who lost her expensive engagement ring and her diamond wrist watch, has been disconsolate ever the loss for they were presents from her husband, Edward Hillman, Jr. It will be interesting to see what James Hall does after his work in "Hell's Angels." Warners seems to be concentrating on Ben Ames Williams' stories. They have also purchased "Barber John's Boy." This is a story of father love with Archie Mayo directing and Joe Jackson doing the adaptation.

WEDNESDAY NIGHT, June 4. And that means this coming Wednesday, is being put down on the calendar with a red mark. "The Florodora Girl," Marion Davies' picture, opens at the new Paniages Theater and everyone in filmland will be there. Marion is one of the most popular girls in Hollywood and her friends are turning out in large numbers to see her in her latest picture. I hope that no one will arrive at the theater on a bicycle in honor of the "Gay Nineties" picture, but if they do, it will be all right as the guests will be well protected in either banana cabs or on bicycles. Miss Davies is to be the guest of honor at the George Olsen night club in Culver City, following the premiere, where "Florodora" night is being planned for her.

RADIO STAR IS KEITH-ALBEE HEADLINER

Peter Higgins, radio star, is the headliner on the Keith-Albee stage this week, while the screen displays Warner Baxter in "Such Men Are Dangerous," a film concocted by the practiced hands of Elinor Glyn. As might be expected, the plot is unusual and tells the tale of how an exceedingly ugly gentleman had his face and figure made over so that he might exact a little revenge on his erring wife.

Mr. Baxter works very hard at this role, but even he cannot make the dialogue seem very real. As sometimes happens these days, the idea of the photoplay is much better than its incidental conversation, and to make matters worse the characters all converse in what they believe is a wonderfully well-bred manner. To the audience, it merely seems murder done on the King's English.

Also in the cast is Claud Allister, who is merely required to laugh occasionally, but does this so well that he utterly outranks all the other players. Catherine Dale Owen is the heroine, and works almost as hard as Mr. Baxter with considerably less pleasing results, while Hedda Hooper gives another of her tremendously painful "social" characterizations.

On the stage, the Keith-Albee has another of its excellent bills, with many an act beside that of Mr. Higgins. Among the assorted entertainers are Chamberlain and Himes, lately featured in Mr.l Ziegfeld's "Follies"; also Farrell and Florence, the Lamonts, and Behee and Rubyette.

WOLHEIM IN WAR FILM

Louis Wolheim, famed the world over as the symbol of all that is brutal and beastial in screen narration, is to be seen at the Majestic tonight in an entirely new light in a film version of Erich Maria Remarque's "All Quiet on the Western Front." In this highly praised picturization, Wolheim plays a comedy role instead of Katz, a burly but kindly infantryman who would be the hero of the production were it not for the fact that the public hesitates to accept fat and funny men as heroes.

Louis Wolheim

Louis Wolheim was born in New York in 1881 and was educated in the public schools and Cornell University, where he later was a professor of mathematics. His broken nose, famed in many screen successes and perhaps his greatest asset, was received while playing football in his collegiate days.

Ten years ago Lionel Barrymore induced Wolheim to leave college walls for the footlights and he later went into the movies.

Petrovitch Here

Ivan Petrovitch, who appeared in "Three Passions" and "Garden of Allah," Rex Ingram productions, is on his way to Hollywood for a visit. He returns to England within a few weeks to resume work in his own productions, which are being released in England by Greenbaum.

CLEVER CAST IN FARCE

"Loose Ankles," not so long ago a furious farce on the Boston stage, has now been made into a motion picture and may be seen this week at both the Modern and the Fenway. Loretta Young and Douglas Fairbanks are its avowed stars, but since Louise Fazenda is also in the cast, it follows that she walks away with the film.

She has pretty keen competition, however, for Otis Harlan, an excellent actor, and Daphne Pollard, the amusing Cockney comedienne, are among the contributing players.

As some stage enthusiasts will remember, the plot of "Loose Ankles" has to do with a quartet of dancing men, sometimes unkindly known as "gigolos," who become involved with several elderly but lively ladies, much to their own embarrassment and the amusement of the audience.

Mr. Fairbanks, of course, is not really a gigolo at all, but the honest hero who finally wins the heiress despite relatives, police raids, and incidental scandals. And Miss Young, rising young actress of the films, is heroine.

Screen Shorts

Fred Niblo is supervising the cutting of "Easy Going," although no ending has been "shot."

Harry Langdon has completed his featured role in "A Soldier's Plaything," which was directed by Michael Curtis.

Henry Armetta has been signed for two years to appear in RKO shorts. The actor leaves for the East July 1.

Paramount is expected to star Jack Oakie in "Kid Boots," in which Eddie Cantor appeared on the stage.

Lillian Roth has been assigned a role in "Madame Satan," which Cecil B. DeMille is to make for M-G-M.

Norma Shearer and her husband, Irving Thalberg, plan to spend a month in Honolulu instead of going to Europe.

EAST, WEST IN STYLE CONTEST

Hollywood, June 2—Responsibility for the "disgraceful" manner in which the modern girls dress yesterday was placed squarely upon the shoulders of their mothers by Mrs. A. Van of Forest Park Bl.

Mrs. Van's views were expressed in a letter one of the hundreds received daily at the new Pantages Theater, Hollywood, in the Marion Davies' fashion contest.

"The Floradora Girl," Miss Davies' latest motion picture, opens at the Pantages Theater on June 4, and it is that production which has caused a nation-wide discussion of the styles of the gay nineties and present day ones as well.

"I think the way mothers let their daughters dress is a disgrace to both mothers and daughters," Mrs. Van wrote.

"When I was a girl my mother taught me to dress so that I would look respectable on the streets.

"Do the girls do that nowa days?"

"I say no!

"I was riding in the Elevated train one day and there were three girls sitting on one side and men on the other, one of the men said they did not have to go to a show for they could see a leg show all day now.

"I think that is a disgrace to mothers and daughters. I often talk to them and they say I am old fashioned, and I tell them they will see the day they will wish they were old fashioned, too.

"I am 84 years old and I would like to see the old styles come back."

Mrs. Van's opinions are not shared by Mrs. Amanda Jacobs of 484 Quincy st., Dorchester.

"Having worn those same old fashioned styles myself, I don't know of anything that can be said in favor of them, except that they certainly kept us warm at all times of the year, and especially in the good old summertime."

The BIG House

A Thrilling Drama of Life and Love, Baring The Horrors Behind Prison Walls

By JACK LAIT

Adapted from the screen play by Frances Marion and George H. Hill. A Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Cosmopolitan production.

Morgan Tells Anne He's An Ex-Convict, But She Calls Him Back

Morgan Kissed her again and again. Anne had lost all resistance. "Let me go, John" Anne begged at last.

In the first chapter of "The BIG House" we meet Duncan Morgan, a good-looking young man who was sent to jail for his third "stretch." Morgan was a robber. He got away with crime for a while, but the cops were too fast for him. Next we meet Dean Ward Kent. On a wild New Year's Eve party his drunken driving results in a terrible smashup. Kent is found guilty of manslaughter, as one girl was killed, and is sent to the BIG House for seven years. He is thrown into a cell with two others and is saved by Morgan from a beating by the terrible "Butch." Morgan confronts Kent. The convicts start a riot over food. Kent slips a knife in Morgan's pocket and the latter is placed in solitary confinement when it is found. He escapes from the prison hospital in a dead man's shroud, makes love to Anne and is warned by his former sweetheart, Ruby.

CHAPTER 12

It was Duncan Morgan's second Sunday at the Marlowe suburban home. He had seen Anne every day during the past week, and each meeting had brought them closer and closer together. He had followed Ruby Barlow's advice and had changed his roominghouse. It was more convenient now, anyway, for he had settled more closely to the bookshop. Saturday night Anne had said:

"Of course you will be out tomorrow."

"And how!"

They both laughed and both blushed.

"It's home to me, now," Morgan said.

"Mother and father think so much of you—they like you more and more——"

"And I like them, too, Anne—very much. And you —how do you feel toward me?"

"I? I—like you—because you are so handy with the ice-cream freezer."

And, in fact, on his second visit he was again assigned to the task of freezing the ice-cream for dinner. He was busily engaged in turning it, humming all the time, when Anne came up.

Won't Marry Kent
Anne Tells Morgan

"Hello, Anne," he called, "I'm almost through. Lady, I get a kick out of this. When I was a kid, there was a family in our neighborhood who used to make ice cream every Sunday — a bunch of us would sit on the fence with our tongues hanging out. How rich we thought they were. Once they let us taste it. And I swallowed mine so fast it made me sick. Funny how such things break in life, isn't it?"

He continued to turn the handle of the freezer.

"John—John—" faltered Anne.

At the sound of her voice Morgan leaped up and caught her by the arm.

What—is it, Anne?

"I—I was just talking to mother," she began in a voice which seemed on the verge of breaking. "I was telling her that I had explained to you all about Dean and had asked your advice about getting him out——"

Entered Soul
Morgan Drew Back

"Yes, yes, but why should all this make you so unhappy?"

"She wanted to know if I had told you I intended marrying him when he came out. She thought I should tell you—she said it was only fair."

"Yes," Morgan's voice was low. He scraped the toe of his shoe on the earth floor and swallowed hard.

"But I don't intend marrying him, John." Anne looked up into his eyes, a suppliant.

Morgan could not contain himself. The next thing he knew he had her in his arms, her warm, soft body close to his.

"Anne—Anne, I love you so!"

He kissed her again and again. Her lips were yielding and half-parted. She had lost all resistance.

"Let me go, John — please," she begged.

She seemed terrified at his passion. Then his burning kisses awoke in her a response and she clung to him and kissed him too. She became more passive, and freed a long, deep sigh. Morgan's sense of possession was now complete, and he held her away from him so that he could look upon her beautiful upturned face. Her lips were crimson with his kisses and

ENGLISH MAYOR GUEST OF CURLEY

New Head of Mother Church

SINCLAIR IS TO SUCCEED W. W. DAVIS

Editor Is Elected President of the First Church of Christ, Scientist

Duncan Sinclair, associate editor of the Christian Science Journal and Christian Science Sentinel, was elected president of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, the Mother Church, in annual meeting today.

Mr Sinclair succeeds William W Davis, former state senator and well-known hotel man

Edward L. Ripley of Brookline was re-elected treasurer and Ezra W. Palmer of Brookline was re-elected clerk. George Shaw Cook of Chicago and Mrs. Elizabeth I Norwood of Brookline continue as first and second reader respectively

EDITOR FOR EIGHT YEARS

The new president has been a teacher of Christian Science since 1916 and associate editor of the two organs of the church since 1922. He is a graduate of St Andrew's University, Scotland, and later taught metallurgy and science at Glasgow Academy

Miss M. Ethel Whitcomb, of this city, and Ralph B. Scholfield, of London, Eng., were added to the board of lectureship.

The annual meeting, attended by over 8000 Christian Scientists, was held in the edifice in the Back Bay.

Announcement was made that in the past year 82 new Christian Scientist churches and societies have been formed in various parts of the world as branches of the Mother church

FIFTY IN UNITED STATES

Of this number 50 were established in the United States; 21 in Europe; 4 in Canada; 2 in Africa; 5 in Australasia

The report, which proved of special interest in view of present-day discussion as to whether religion generally is gaining or waning in its appeal to mankind, was made by the department of branches and practitioners.

The report of Treasurer Edward L. Ripley showed a balance on hand of $215,584.01 in the general fund on April 30, after expenditures of $1,887,536.01 for the year. Trust fund balances are $582,761.16.

One of the main disbursements was that of $794,095 in the construction of the sanatorium in San Francisco.

BIG DEBT REDUCTION.

Indebtedness on real estate owned by the Mother Church was reduced $998,000 during the year.

Referring to recent criticisms of Mary Baker Eddy and the attitude of Christian Scientists toward them, C. Augustus Norwood, chairman of the committee on publications, said:

"Informed and unprejudiced observers have realized that the criticisms directed against the attitude and actions of Christian scientists regarding misrepresentations of their religion and their leader have been based on a few instances where zeal exceeded wisdom.

"Christian Science truly, has no enemies. Our duties must be carried out under the law of loving our seeming enemies."

Wants His Job

Alfred Nickerson, 89, Civil War veteran, tells of efforts to dismiss him from $30 a week job in Chelsea city stables. (Staff photo.)

MAYOR BACKS G.A.R. VET

"Mother and I get a good bit of strength by this job of mine, for it keeps us independent. I hope they don't have the mayor fire me."

An aged Civil War veteran spoke thus, today, in the city stable at Chelsea, when he discussed efforts of the Chelsea Mutual Protective Association to have him dismissed from his $30 a week job, because free men, in addition are employed by the city to care for the eight horses and equipment the public houses

The veteran is Albert Nickerson, 89, the only Civil War veteran employed by the City of Chelsea. He lives with his aged wife at No. 2 Jefferson ave., and the city pay, supplied with his pension to enable himself and his wife to enjoy independence and a measure of comfort as he nears the end of his journey.

Mayor Whalen insists that he will pay no heed to the demands of the organization of taxpayers that to remove the veteran from the payroll

Three months ago, when the veteran appealed to him for assistance the mayor put him on the job

"He's worth every cent we're paying him, even if the city doesn't owe him anything for what he did in the Civil war," the mayor declared today. "When there is not much doing about the stables, he cuts as watchman streets that are torn up or being repaired, and as far as I am concerned he is going to stay on the job."

LEGISLATURE BLAMED FOR PRISON BLOT

Penologist Maxey Lays Continuance of Charlestown to Delay in Abolition

Scoring members of the Massachusetts Legislature for dilatory tactics in dodging the issue of selling the State prison, Robert E. Lee Maxey, Arkansas attorney and penologist, declared to a gathering of men and women at the New Thought Forum, 30 Huntington ave, Back Bay, yesterday, that the Charlestown "bastile" is a blot on the name of the Commonwealth.

"Away with this eyesore and breeding place of disease and fire hazard known as the State prison at Charlestown," declared Maxey in an address for "fair play" for the prisoners there. "Close this hell hole at once and transfer the inmates to the Norfolk prison colony. Thank God we have a paper like the Boston Evening American advocating the closing of such a dark and unwholesome place in which to cage human beings."

TELLS OF INSPECTION

Maxey was preceded by Timothy J Murphy of New York, labor leader, who flayed the State prison at Charlestown as unfit for habitation and a breeding place for criminals. He told how he and Maxey inspected the prison recently and were shown "only the good side of the institution in a beautiful way." He said he didn't believe all he was told about the good side of the prison

"Abolish the present evils inside the State prison at Charlestown by shutting the doors and transferring the prisoners to a farm where the prisoners can enjoy air and sunshine and rejuvenate their mind," added Murphy, who gave his experiences inspecting the prison.

Murphy closed his address by presenting Attorney Maxey as a man who studied the thickness of the ancient State prison at Charlestown."

In opening his speech of an hour or more, Attorney Maxey contrasted the fire horror at the state prison at Columbus, Ohio, with the possibility of one at the Charlestown institution unless immediate steps were taken by the prison committee to close the plant.

PRAISES WARDEN

"We've got more charitable work to perform in the United States than out of it and we should begin by aiding in the movement advocated by the Boston Evening American in closing the ancient prison at Charlestown," thundered Maxey.

"When I heard the story of how they held Jesse Pomeroy in solitary confinement for years in that hellhole in Charlestown I wonder if our boasted civilization and humanitarian works missed fire there. Shame on a state that allows the continuation of that prison.

"I have nothing but praise for the warden and officers of the State prison and condemnation for the shirking members of the Legislature in failing to support a proposition to sell the prison and provide funds to complete the more modern prison colony at Norfolk.

DORCHESTER ENTERTAINS VISITOR TONIGHT

Tercentenary Guest Attends Service at First Parish Church

Attired in the red robes of his office Mayor Percy H. H. Wheeler and his delegation from Dorchester, England, marched to City Hall today and conveyed to Mayor Curley the greetings of the English municipality

After the reception, Mayor Wheeler and his party were the guests of Mayor Curley on the city hall reviewing stand to witness the parade of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company and their out-of-state military comrades

The Dorchester mayor was in city hall, joined Mayor Curley in the presentation of keys to two new apartment houses, the first of a series of settlement houses.

The two keys, Gerald Joseph and Severino Zanelli, both of the North End Union on Parmenter st, were presented to the two mayors by John J. Walsh, chairman of the boys' section of settlement house work.

Tonight the lord mayor and his party are to be guests of the Dorchester Tercentenary celebration committee at a reception and dinner in the Hotel Somerset. Charles D. M. Bishop will be toastmaster.

WELCOMED AT CHURCH

On his first day in Boston, Mayor Wheeler was officially welcomed at the Tercentenary service in the First Parish Congregational Church at Meeting House Hill Clad in his scarlet robe, edged with ermine, and wearing the heavy gold seal of his municipality, he was accorded an enthusiastic reception as he made his appearance

Rev. Adelbert L. Hudson, pastor, offered the invocation. Prayer followed, led by Rev. Eugene R. Shippen, D D of Milton. Col. Albert S. Youngman brought the greetings of the Commonwealth in the absence of Gov Allen, Maj Charles T. Harding, of the election commission, represented Mayor Curley.

GIVES AUTOGRAPH

"Visits such as this mean so much to the mutual understanding of English-speaking people. It is a happy means of counseling the ills that binds," Mayor Wheeler said in response to the addresses of welcome.

Mayor Wheeler devoted more than half an hour to autographing programs for the worshippers

As he was leaving the edifice he was accosted by a small boy, who declared that he came from Liverpool

"How do you like our country," the youngster asked

"Your Dorchester is a fine country but one is surprised at the small number of trees to be found here. I thought it would be much more woods. But, my boy, you have a fine young country in a good country," the mayor said.

BRINGS GIFT

Deputy Mayor Ernest W. Tilley presented a small table to Dr Hudson on behalf of the parishioners of St Peter and Holy Trinity Church in Dorchester, England. The table is inlaid with portions of Roman flooring dating back almost 2000 years

HARVARD STUDENT GETS JAIL SENTENCE FOR HELMET LARCENY

JUDGE STONE GIVES HIM 10 DAYS

Declares That College Men Should Be on the Side of Law and Order

Declaring that Harvard students should be for law and order, but that events of late seemed to indicate that they are on the other side of the fence, Judge Arthur P. Stone in district court at Cambridge today sentenced George P. Huntington, Harvard, '32, to ten days in jail for larceny of a fireman's helmet.

Huntington, whose home is in Providence and who rooms at 52 Mt. Auburn st in the "Gold Coast" section, was arrested during a fire yesterday morning and at the hearing Mr. was posed by Patrolman John Dewey, in the act of taking the helmet from Lawler 2 according to the testimony.

Huntington had asked to be allowed to plead guilty. His request was denied. After hearing the evidence Judge Stone himself a Harvard man, said:

"Harvard students should be on the side of law and order. Events of late seem to indicate that they are on the other side of the fence. I am going to sentence you to 10 days in the house of correction."

Huntington appealed and furnished bonds for his appearance in Superior Court.

FIREMAN FAILS TO SAVE WIFE

William H. Tobin, fireman attached to the emergency crew at headquarters, went home to Woburn today to find his wife unconscious from gas poisoning, and all the skill which served to win him commendation in a dozen other cases failed to avail him in a desperate battle against death.

Thomas Powers, retired Boston fireman, who had accompanied Tobin home to spend a day off with him summoned medical, police and fire department aid, while the husband worked feverishly in an attempt at resuscitation by the prone method. The woman was finally pronounced dead an hour and a half after the two men arrived.

Both smelled gas after their ring went unanswered and Tobin, sensing a street door in a window. The house was filled with gas pouring from a stove, whose flames had been extinguished by an overboiling coffee pot. Two children of the couple were not at home. Mrs. Tobin, who was 40, was the former Violet Babb of Middleboro, where Tobin was a member of the fire department before being appointed to the Boston force.

A dog so intelligent he knows opens and closes the door of his own kennel, but also the doors of kennels housing other canines being held by the Animal Rescue League while an effort is being made to locate the dog's owner.

The dog came to the League up on the South End last week. How he found his way from the Animal Rescue League is a mystery, the officials say, as he was brought in from the suburbs.

Essex Fugitive in Theft Held in Paris

Whether the state will seek to extradite William H. Hood, held by Paris police will be decided at a conference late today between Dist. Atty. William C. Clark of Essex county and Atty. Gen. Joseph E. Warner.

It is [illegible] said today that in view of the substantial amount of money required to bring Hood back it was imperative that the case against him be sufficiently strong to assure conviction.

To Make Difficult Ocean Soundings Off Georges Bank

The S. S. Lydonia is taking on supplies here and will soon join the Oceanographer, which was formerly J. P. Morgan's Corsair, in making soundings off Georges Banks. The results may result in the recharting of the North Atlantic Sea bottom. Recent testings at Georges Banks gave rise to reports that no bottom could be found in technical tests.

The fathometer is used in finding depths and is an electric automatic device for measuring the lapse of the time it takes a sound originating at the ship to return as an echo.

The hydrophone in hands of Junior Lieut. G. Kenneth Crosby, radio operator, can pick up sounds 80 miles distant.. It will be lowered over side of the S. S. Lydonia. The sound from the Oceanographer ocean blasts will be recorded on this small bit of equipment. (Staff photos.)

BOY, 11, WRITES POEMS BY THE HUNDREDS

Mattapan Youth Also Has Score of Playlets and Gets Out a Paper

By FRANCIS L. BAIRD

Whoever said that poets are born, not made, never heard of Arthur Cantor, 11, Mattapan's "boy poet laureate." Arthur says he is self-made.

He has written hundreds of poems and a score of playlets since he first decided to become a poet, four years ago.

"I read Longfellow's 'The Slave's Dream' and decided that I would like to write like that," Arthur confided. "So I started in to make things I wanted to say in rhymes. I developed gradually and some of my early efforts were not very good, but after a while it became easier to find words that would fit my metres so I wrote more and better poems."

Arthur's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Cantor, of 35 Clarkwood st., Mattapan.

The first edition of his newspaper, "The Daily Poet," appeared this week, a special four pages celebrating Memorial Day. This edition is to be read at school for the exercises in his room, sixth grade of the Roger Wolcott school, on Wednesday.

The newspaper is owned by a "corporation" consisting of Editor Cantor and his two chums, Simon Nathanson and Arthur York. The editor not only writes the entire paper but controls its business policy also.

Arthur is the youngest member of a family of five children, three girls, Martha, Gloria and Ramona, and two boys, Alfred and the young poet.

START SURVEY OF OCEAN

Faced with one of the most difficult tasks ever undertaken by the government, the United States Coastal Geodetic Survey steamer Lydonia was taking on supplies today at the Army Base, preparatory to taking soundings off Georges banks.

The soundings which may make necessary a re-charting of the North Atlantic sea bottom as the result of an earthquake several months ago, will be a second to the palatial yacht Corsair, a gift to the coastal survey from J. P. Morgan.

The Corsair, now renamed the Oceanographer, is en route from Norfolk to Georges Banks where, last January a sea captain reported he could find no bottom.

According to Commander Robert F. Luce of the New England district U. S. Coastal Geodetic Survey directing the project, it will be a difficult task.

"We do not believe that the floor of the ocean has changed as much as was reported," Commander Luce said, however, "on account of the distance from shore, which is some 200 miles east of Cape Cod, it is probable that the sea captain was mistaken in his location."

It will take several seasons to complete the survey of the area covered by Georges Banks.

Captain George W. Cowie with eight officers and a crew of 40 men will take the Lydonia to Georges banks next Monday, where the task of making ocean soundings from every 20 seconds at two fathoms depth to every minute at over 10 fathoms, will begin.

TNT bombs the size of tomato cans, a fathometer, hydrophone and a chronograph and compass will be used in making this highly technical survey which will map the floor of the ocean for the benefit of fisherman and for aiding transatlantic liners.

The body of a well-dressed young man was taken from Charles river basin, near 234 Beacon st, shortly after daybreak today, by Metropolitan Police Officers Jerome Murray, Walter Dennis and Joseph Connolly. They saw the body floating and pulled it ashore with the aid of a small boat.

The dead man apparently was 20 to 25 years old, weighed 145 pounds, was five feet seven inches in height and wore a gray suit, brown striped silk shirt and black shoes.

The body was removed to the Northern Mortuary.

ANCIENTS AND THEIR GUESTS OPEN HUB TERCENTENARY CEREMONY

PARADE AND DRUMHEAD ELECTION

Centennial Legion, Dating Back to the 13 Colonies, Takes Part in Exercises

Boston and the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Co., with the Centennial Legion as guests, officially opened today the Hub's observance of the Massachusetts Bay Tercentenary.

The day was designated as "Ancients' Day," with the oldest military organization in this country celebrating its 292nd anniversary.

Featuring the day was the largest parade ever held by the Ancients, a parade always followed by the annual drumhead election on Boston Common.

In this parade members of the Centennial Legion, made up of military organizations having their inception in the original 13 colonies, participated.

PROGRAM OPENS AT DAWN.

The program was opened at dawn by the sounding of reveille. At 8:45 the Ancients placed a wreath on the tomb of their first commander in King's Chapel burial ground.

At 9 a. m. commanding officers of the Ancients and of the Centennial Legion, as well as prominent army and navy officers in Boston were guests of Mayor Curley and the city at a breakfast in the Charles Dickens rooms at the Parker House.

Following the breakfast, the guests accompanied Mayor Curley to City Hall, where the mayor officiated at raising of a new flag.

The most colorful spectacle of the day was the Ancient parade through the city, but this year the usual numbers were augmented by the units of the Centennial Legion.

Under direction of Major W. H Myrick, commander of the Ancients, the paraders formed in the vicinity of Faneuil Hall at 11 45 a. m.

The parade route was laid up State st. to Washington st., south in Washington st. to School st. and City Hall, where Mayor Curley was to review, then to Tremont st and to Park st., to Beacon st. and the State House.

At the State House, Gov. Allen was to review the marchers, and then fall in line for the balance of the parade east in Beacon st. to Tremont st., to Boylston pl., to Copley sq. and the New Old South Meeting House

Here, the annual church services were to be held Then the schedule called for re-forming of the parade line to proceed to Boston Common, via Boylston, Arlington and Beacon sts., to the entrance at Arlington and Beacon sts

DRUMHEAD ELECTION

Here the colorfully uniformed bands in the parade were to be massed under direction of D. A. Ives, bandmaster, for the annual drumhead election at 3 30

Tonight the Ancients' annual banquet with officers of the Centennial Legion as principal guests, will be held at the Copley Plaza, ending the Ancients' 292d birthday observance

The Centennial Legion, however will be in the Hub on convention tomorrow also.

Boston's official opening followed that of the Commonwealth, held last night in Symphony Hall, with the Centennial Legion and officers of the Ancients as guests

Pleas for religious tolerance and the separation of church and politics were sounded at an earlier meeting on Boston Common by a Catholic, a Jew and a Protestant.

PLEAS FOR TOLERANCE.

They were Senator David I. Walsh, Leverett Saltonstall, speaker of the House, and Irving Lehman, associate justice of the New York Court of Appeals. Also speaking was President Ada Louise Comstock of Radcliffe.

At the Symphony Hall meeting Governor Walsh and a representative of Mayor Curley welcomed the Centennial Legion in the name of the commonwealth and of the city. The Boston Symphony Orchestra of 95 pieces played a concert.

At the breakfast, Mayor Curley declared the country should be proud of such men as make up her military organizations

"In decided contrast," he said, "we recently had the spectacle of an element advocating a union of church and state, and the advocating of birth control by another element whose representatives, strangely enough, were known as leaders during the war.

"As American citizens, we should all do our utmost to uphold American ideals, and this the men of such an organizations as are represented here are doing always. You are preserving the heritage for which our forefathers sacrificed."

MEDAL FOR CURLEY

Mayor Curley was presented by the Centennial Legion with the Legion's highest award, the medal of honor, Col. Thomas S. Lanard of Philadelphia, commander of the Legion, making the presentation

It was only the second such award to a civilian in 96 years, the first being to Mayor Kendricks of Philadelphia in 1926.

Other speakers at the breakfast included Col. Washington Bowie, of Baltimore vice-commander of the Centennial Legion, Maj. James W. H. Myrick, commander of the Ancients; Capt. Pierre Latham of the French Navy, and Maj.-Gen. Clarence R. Edwards.

Child's Yearning for Style Costs Life

Margaret MacConachie, 10, died at the Weymouth hospital today, the victim of her desire to have her hair "curled like other girls."

The parents, Mr. and Mrs. John MacConachie, left the child in charge of another girl, Margaret Winkfield, while they went to Mal den to attend a wake.

Alone in the kitchen of the home at 42 Manomet rd., Weymouth, Margaret decided to curl her hair In turning on the gas to heat the curling iron, she set fire to her clothing The Winkfield girl, in another part of the house, did not hear the child's screams.

Margaret's screams were heard however, by Mrs. Albert Estes, a neighbor, who tore off the burning clothing. Margaret was severely burned about the face and body

FIRE DEPUTY TAKES POST

A Horatio Alger story in real life was told today, when Horace W. Hutchins, Jr., after 13 years in the Somerville fire department, stepped from the ranks of Ladder 3 and was sworn in as deputy chief of the department.

Hutchins, 40 years of age, has the distinction of being the youngest man who ever held the position of deputy chief His rapid advancement has been due entirely to the civil service, the young fireman passing one examination after the other with record marks

Hutchins' wife was with him as he bade farewell to his associates at Ladder 1 and Engine 3 today. His "buddies" in the ranks presented him a gold watch and gave Mrs. Hutchins a bouquet of roses as the couple departed from the Somerville City Hall, where Hutchins was sworn into his new position When the new deputy chief reached his office he found the room banked with flowers.

Fair Tonight With No More High Wind

Fair today and tonight with not much change in temperature is the prediction of the local weather bureau.

No return of Sunday's high wind is looked for The gale came unexpected to the weather sharps and is believed to have been cause by a disturbance centering over the St. Lawrence valley and the northern coast of Maine.

At 9 a. m. today the temperature was 58. Breezes from the northwest were blowing at six miles an hour.

Mrs. Miley Buried

Superintendent of Police Michael H. Crowley was one of the pall bearers today at the funeral of Mrs. Elizabeth S. Miley, widow of the late Thomas Miley, for many years a wagon builder in South Boston. Funeral services were at the Miley home, 19 Lothrop st., Milton, and later at St. Angela's Church, Blue Hill ave., Mattapan.

AIR LINE LINKS N. E. STATES

By GEORGE HAMBLIN

The strides being made in air transportation in New England cannot be realized until one tries to go from place to place by airplane. This fact is brought out by the announcement that Consolidated Airways has joined the group of airplane companies, and will be in operation within two weeks

Consolidated Airways is a Newburyport organization, with home offices in that city and with its tenacles spread all over the New England States. When the company starts operations it will include Boston, Hartford, Springfield, White River Junction and Whitefield, N. H

Direct service from New York via Boston to the White Mountains will be offered as soon as the line starts, and extensions will be made during the first month of operations to include Augusta and Bangor, Me.

The Newburyport Chamber of Commerce, through its secretary, Herbert Folsom, and two other Newburyporters, James Dexgens and Earl Crabb, are responsible for this new air service to the residents of New England and its summer visitors

The routes planned by the company include the States of Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Hampshire and Vermont. Before the first of July, New England will have in full operation a connecting air line with the remainder of the 48 states, to say nothing of the countries to the south of us

Coast Guardsmen Nab Rum Tractor

New York, June 2 (AP)—Balked from using a sand bar in Great South Bay, L. I., as a place to land liquor, rum runners bought a tractor.

It made so much noise residents of Blue Point, a summer resort, protested. Coast guardsmen seized the tractor last night and 150 cases of choice liquor. A schooner anchored off the bar left hurriedly.

Canadian Editor Lauds Stand Taken by Hearst

F. N. Southam, publisher of a number of Canada's leading progressive newspapers, has sent the following message of appreciation to William Randolph Hearst for the interview Mr. Hearst granted C. O. Smith, Washington representative of the Southam newspapers. The interview as it appeared in the Canadian papers was reprinted in yesterday's Sunday Advertiser. The message to Mr. Hearst follows:

Montreal, Que., May 29, 1930.
William Randolph Hearst,
San Simeon, Cal.

I should like to express my cordial appreciation of the interview you have given C. O. Smith, our Washington representative.

This question of good relations between your nation and ours is of paramount importance and I feel that your present statement is a sound contribution to it.

It may be many years before we can reach that basis of complete understanding which would open the way to such an agreement as you contemplate and there are of course collateral problems to be solved on both sides. But meanwhile we can none of us doubt the wisdom or usefulness of seeking accord where accord should be easiest and strengthening a moral alliance that is after all only natural.

There is, I might add, encouragement in your reminder that American opinion is not unanimous in its approval of a tariff policy which we in Canada are compelled to regard as a piece of international thoughtlessness.

Our editors will join me in thanking you for the courtesy you have shown the Southam newspapers and their Washington correspondent.

Toronto Daily Star Features Interview

Universal Service

Toronto, Ont., June 1 The Daily Star featured under a by-line on page one Mr. Hearst's statement on Anglo-American relations.

The statement was under the following heading "ANGLO-AMERICAN PACT TO FOSTER WORLD PEACE ADVOCATED BY MR. HEARST." The second line of the heading said "U. S. Publisher Would Set Maximum, Not Maximum for Two Powers' Fleet."

The third line said: "London naval treaty will impede genuine agreement between two nations."

The text carried on the story in full was one and three-fourths columns. The Star makes no comment editorially.

"Significant," Says Winnipeg Tribune

Universal Service

Winnipeg, Man., June 1 The Winnipeg Tribune carried Mr. Hearst's statement on Anglo-American relations on the first page under the following heading:

"HEARST DECLARES FOR ANGLO-UNITED STATES CO-OPERATIVE AGREEMENT. CRITICAL OF NAVY TREATY AND ANGLO-STATES TARIFF."

The Tribune, from its editorial comment, says:

"The interview given the Tribune's representative at Washington by William Randolph Hearst raises interesting questions. Mr. Hearst is a powerful figure in the United States. A vigorous and arresting personality in himself, he commands a large audience of the American people day by day than any other man. What he has to say on a subject of such outstanding importance as the relations between the British empire and the United States is therefore not only of interest, but of highest significance.

"After reading Mr. Hearst's statement of his views, various questions will arise in the mind of the average Canadian. Is not Mr. Hearst far in advance of the public sentiment of his own country? Have we had the slightest indication that the United States in world affairs is prepared to co-operate with the British empire except in a very limited degree? Has not the tendency in recent years been to accentuate the attitude of aloofness?

"These questions arise. Evidence can be cited to show that these doubts are valid. Yet may it not be that the real difficulty is lack of understanding? We are of course perfectly aware of our own complete friendliness of spirit and confident of the correctness of our attitude toward the United States. But may not the American people likewise be animated by a most friendly spirit toward the British empire and similarly be regretting in our attitude evidences of an unwillingness to co-operate fully with them?

"Mr. Hearst's interview may create certain doubts as to the course we have been pursuing. At least it compels thought, which is all to the good.

"The project of an Anglo-American understanding and defensive alliance will unquestionably secure the heartiest endorsation of the Canadian people."

Received With Great Interest in Canada

Universal Service

Calgary, Alta., June 1 — Mr. Hearst's statement on Anglo-American relations appeared on page one of the Calgary Herald under a three-column feature head. A picture of Mr. Hearst appeared with the statement. Commenting Editorially the Calgary Herald says:

"Considerable interest attaches to the proposal of William Randolph Hearst that a definite and permanent understanding should be reached between Great Britain and the United States to ensure peace between themselves and the imagination of his fellow countrymen.

"Meanwhile, Lord Beaverbrook will undoubtedly be elated to note that Mr. Hearst gives his hearty blessing to the empire free trade scheme."

The Manchester Guardian, one of Britain's most important journals carries today a whole column of Mr. Hearst's interview.

promote peace throughout the world.

"The circumstance surrounding his considered statement, which appears elsewhere in this issue, are somewhat unique. He is one of the best known newspaper publishers in the United States and, like other members of the profession, does not take kindly to the experience of being interviewed. On this occasion he was asked by the representative of the Southam newspapers in Washington to elaborate his views on international relationships, more especially as they concerned the two great English-speaking nations. These will be read with great interest in Canada as well as in The States."

Hearst Statement Given Prominence

Universal Service

Montreal, June 1—The Montreal Star gave prominence to a statement by William Randolph Hearst in which the American publisher defines what he believes should be the relationship between the British Empire and the United States.

The article which was widely discussed in business and political circles appeared under the display headline: "EQUALITY MUST BE BASIS FOR ANGLO-AMERICAN TREATY." A second headline says: "Well-known publisher says pact impossible if either seeks to gain petty advantages." While points which appear to be of special interest to Montreal Star readers are further emphasized by black type cross lines stating "For World Peace" and "World Support Beaverbrook."

BIG BETTORS BACK SHARKEY TO WIN

EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

FOR SPORTS—CALL LIBERTY 4000 MONDAY, JUNE 2, 1930 FOR SPORTS—CALL LIBERTY 4000

47,000 Fans See Braves Crushed By Giants

MR. BOSTON
—by— JACK CONWAY

Mr. Boston made a flying trip to Boston over the week-end from Jack Sharkey's camp at Orangeburg, N. Y.

"There are a flock of young Bostons out in Jamaica Plain," explained the veteran to Paul Bowser, "and they cannot understand why a world's heavyweight championship bout between Jack Sharkey and Max Schmeling should interfere with their dad taking them for their Sunday buggy ride.

"Now that I have performed that duty I am on my way back to Orangeburg to get another peek at Sharkey, and then I'll breeze to Endicott, N. Y., to get a glimpse of Max Schmeling in action.

"I had a chat with Benny Leonard the other day, and he tells me Schmeling has improved in his work during the past week. Herr Max is banging to close quarters and flying away with both hands. Schmeling, says Benny, has concluded he cannot hope to outbox the experienced Sharkey, and so intends to make a fight out of it. He believes that by diving in close and barraging with both hands to the head and body he will have a chance to crash through with a knockout.

"Leonard also tipped me that Schmeling's wind and endurance are good and that he is confident he will be able to travel the full distance of 15 rounds at top speed if necessary. Max thinks Sharkey will tire after 10 frames and that he will then forge out front. I'll know more about Schmeling's condition and battle plans after I watch him work.

"As for Sharkey, he weighs around 200 pounds and is ready to fight right now. He can afford to take things easy until the final few days of training when he can open up with all steam possible. Sharkey tells me he will knock Schmeling out."

Bowser Says McCoy Has Sonny on the Run

"I regret you can't be in town to see Bibber McCoy wrestle Jack Sherry at the Arena on Thursday night," declared Bowser. "This should be one of the hardest fought wrestling matches ever staged in this city.

"I hear that Sonnenberg is shooting for Sherry to win. Gus doesn't care for any more of McCoy's game. It has been hinted that Gus will hand Sherry the errand on a silver platter if he can tip McCoy over.

"Bibber is one of the few wrestlers who is able to use the flying tackle as well as Sonny. He mastered the tackle when playing football at Holy Cross. He secured the first fall in the tussle with Sonnenberg at the Arena and would have won the title if he had not been fooled for a headlock on the buck. I don't blame Sonny for trying to steam Sherry into a hurry when he can defeat McCoy.

"If McCoy should win from Sherry, Sonnenberg will have his troubles dodging the Cambridge man."

Boston Is Still Great Town for Baseball

"The tremendous crowd at the Braves-Giants double-header on Sunday proved that Boston is still a marvelous baseball town," said Mr. Boston. "It was necessary to turn away thousands of persons from the Wigwam.

"The fact the Tribe won a double-header from the Giants on Memorial Day and also clicked in the Saturday pastime proved baseball enthusiasm is a high pitch. It was unfortunate that the Braves could not win at least one of the Sunday games, but the fact remains that they did win three out of five from the clan of McGraw."

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

While the swing seems to be more of a left arm and left side proposition, I never recommend stressing the left arm control of the brassie just because you have left the ground. The hands and arms should work together, although many players find it helpful to shove or otherwise start the club back from the ball with wholly a left arm action. There is no fixed rule regarding this shoving away with the left arm has the advantage of keeping the clubhead down. It has perhaps the additional advantage of overcoming to some extent the natural tendency of the right arm to move out and take command of the back swing action. Regardless of your individual method of starting back, be careful to keep the right elbow tucked in so that at the top of the back swing this elbow points toward the ground. (Fig. 1.) Then, in the forward swing, the right arm comes down" (Fig. 2) and is in position to reach out after the ball. If the elbow is out the right arm will roll over and cut across the ball, the familiar effect, which is never desired.

IT'S SOMETIMES TOUGH TO BE A CHAMPION :-: BY HAL COFFMAN

BUSY WEEK FOR 'TWI' LEAGUE

Boston Twi leaguers face a busy week, with nine games scheduled for the stretch starting today and ending Friday. Three good games go on tonight, with South Boston battling the Roslindale nine, Quincy going to Malden and St. John, N. B., playing at Dorchester.

The entry of St. John into the Twi League should arouse new interest in the circuit. The team will play in Greater Boston each week and one of the local clubs will journey to New Brunswick once a week to give the fans there some home games.

St. John is a great baseball town, and with the fast club which has been assembled to represent it, the place should be one of the most enthusiastic of all the Twi League cities.

Other games for this week are: Tomorrow, Roslindale at South Boston; Wednesday, Dorchester at Quincy and Malden at Roslindale; Thursday, St. John at South Boston and Dorchester at Malden; Friday, St. John at Roslindale.

Johnston and Jones Trailing

Saint Germain, France, JJune 2 (AP)—Andre Vagliano and Marcel Dallemagne were one up over Bobby Jones and Jimmy Johnston at the end of nine holes of their 18 hole best ball match today. Four champions holding five titles were in the play. Vagliano is amateur champion of France and Dallemagne won the professional championship last week. Jones is open champion of the United States and amateur champion of Great Britain. Johnston is the amateur champion of the United States.

Al Simmons in Hospital Resting

Philadelphia, June 2 (AP)—Al Simmons, chief clubber of the world's champion Athletics, who was left at home when the A's started on their western trip, is in the graduate hospital of the University of Pennsylvania, "resting up," he says.

Simmons ruptured a blood vessel near the right knee cap in sliding into third base on Memorial day. He said today he was feeling fine and was awaiting the doctor's verdict whether he could leave the hospital or would have to remain for some days.

Big Bettors Back Sharkey to Defeat Max Schmeling

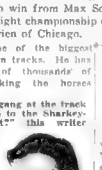
By JACK CONWAY

New York, June 2—The big race track bettors are backing Jack Sharkey to win from Max Schmeling in their 15-round bout for the heavyweight championship of the world on June 12, according to Tim O'Brien of Chicago.

O'Brien, is one of the biggest players at eastern tracks. He has won hundreds of thousands of dollars by picking the horses right.

"What is the gang at the track doing in regard to the Sharkey-Schmeling bout?" this writer asked O'Brien.

"The boys are betting Sharkey," was O'Brien's quick reply. "We bet on horses and on fights, according to form. Sharkey is 27, Schmeling 24 and so both are still young. The age question does not enter into this match.



"On experience, Sharkey has it all over Schmeling. Jack has had 15 to 20 major fights, Max two. All we know about Schmeling is what he showed us against Risko and Paulino. And neither of these men was at his best when he fought the German.

"Sharkey has fought twice since September, knocking out Loughran and Scott. Schmeling has not been in action since he licked Paulino last June. A year is a long time for a young fellow to be out of the ring. Inactivity never helped any athlete or horse for that matter.

types of youngster, a fine home man and a pretty good fighter.

"I still believe that the best of the American heavyweights can turn back Schmeling or any other foreign ring threat."

With the title battle set for a week from Thursday next, at the Yankee Stadium, New York is all steamed up over the match.

Betting odds favor Sharkey at 6 to 5, but few large wagers have been made yet. The big bettors wait for the final word from the training camps before placing their dough.

Schmeling, like Sharkey, has many backers and it is expected that there will be hundreds of thousands of dollars wagered on the championship battle.

Race Track Money Rode With Tunney

"At the time of the Dempsey-Tunney bout at Philadelphia, the race track money went on Gene. The odds were 3 to 1 in favor of Dempsey and the boys on the track made a cleanup when Tunney came in a winner.

"The reason why the race track money made on Tunney was not because the boys had any 'inside' information, but rather because they knew Dempsey had been out of the ring for three years, while Tunney had been boxing steadily.

"Form tells in boxing as in horse racing.

"I am going to attend the Sharkey-Schmeling bout. I have never seen Sharkey in action. I have met him around his hotel in New York several times and like him personally. He is a clean

TILDEN BEATEN BY COCHET

Auteuil, France, June 2 (US)—Before a crowd that was cautioned by officials to restrain the expression of their feelings, Bill Tilden won from Henri Cochet his first set in three years, and then proceeded to lose three in succession and with them the match in the final round of the men's singles in the French hard court championships yesterday.

The scores were: 3—6, 8—6, 6—3, 6—4.

A great deal of feeling was apparent between the two sections of the audience, with the American section showing in a marked way its sympathy with Tilden.

The French part of the crowd screamed applause when Tilden, disagreeing with the linesman on a decision, deliberately threw the final vital point Cochet's way.

Rumored that Helen Wills Moody and Helen Jacobs, her opponent, were not friendly off the courts, won considerable interest from part of the crowd for Miss Jacobs.

Yankee Stars Ready to Get in Game Again

New York, June 2—Fear that Earle Combs might be lost to the Yankees for some time as a result of a foot injury Saturday was dissipated yesterday.

An X-ray plate showed that no bones were broken and Combs was in uniform at the stadium.

Lou McEvoy, who also had been suffering from an injured foot, rejoined the team yesterday and will be ready to pinch again in a few days. Tony Lazzeri is recovering from his cold.

Auto Race Star to Stage a Comeback

Altoona, Pa., June 2—Tony Gulotta, one of the best known of American-Italian drivers, will return to the Altoona speedway in the Flag Day classic June 16 for the first time since he announced in 1927 that he was through with the speed game. Gulotta signed his entry on the eve of the Grand Prize 500-mile event at Indianapolis. With Gulotta will be Mel Kenealy, Pacific Southwest champion, who will get his first chance on the East's "big time" circuit.

Both will drive a Mavy Special, backed by Jim Talbot, Jr., millionaire sportsman from California, who is using the speedways for laboratory tests of a new carburetor invented by Al Melcher, former speed ace.

Diamond Pick-Ups

There is no game in the Hub today. The first Western invasion of the season at the Wigwam will open tomorrow when the champion Chicago Cubs open a three-game series. The Pirates will follow for four games. Then will come the Cards and the Reds.

In fast only one big league contest is carded for this p m. St Louis Cardinals will play the Phillies in Quaker town.

The largest Boston baseball crowd previous to yesterday was the one present at the opening of the Wigwam in 1915, when more than 45,000 people stormed the park.

Several thousand had to stand on the field that day, but there were no left or centerfield stands then. One of the Brooklyn-Red Sox World Series games in 1915 attracted a throng of 42,800. The Sabbath gathering was much larger than either of these, without any doubt.

And several thousand went to the park yesterday to see the games but turned away when they discovered that the grand stand was sold out. Not enough high-class seats been available, the attendance would have exceeded 50,000.

What say now the eccentric baseball fans who are ever presenting facts and figures to show that baseball is losing in popularity?

"Buster" Chatham, Portland Ore., rookie, made his debut as a Warrior in the ring.

He is smaller, physically, than Maravilla, He may be a great player, but he certainly doesn't look the part.

Close to 90,000 fans, an average of 30,000 a day, paid to enter the Tribe during the three days the Giants were present. And what's more surprising, more than 100,000 paid to enter the Stadium in New York to watch the last-place Red Sox play the Yanks during the same period.

Merritt's Defeat Whalen Club, 4-2

Park Commissioner Thomas Puren of Chelsea pitched and batted Jack Falkner of the board of aldermen caught the first ball when Merritt baseball team defeated the Mayor Whalen Club, 4 to 2, in the inaugural game at the opening of the new Merritt park in Chelsea yesterday.

McDonald, Merritt twirler, sewed up his own game when his triple scored the winning run and he himself reached home on a passed ball in the 10th inning.

CROWD SETS RECORD FOR HUB

By JOE CASHMAN

More than 47,000 howling fans, who filled every available inch of room in the spacious Wigwam and constituted the largest gathering in the history of baseball in Boston, saw the Braves slaughtered by the New York Giants in both ends of the Sabbath twin bill.

The official paid attendance was 43,120, but at least 4000 others, according to Judge Fuchs, president of the Braves, witnessed the games.

The Metsmen walked off with the first contest, 8 to 4, and were leading, 16 to 4, when the second tilt was called at the end of seven innings.

The record-breaking throng apparently bewildered the Tribe completely. Except in the first few innings of the opening game, they performed like a group of rank bush leaguers all afternoon. They looked no more like the team that beat the Giants twice on Friday and again on Saturday than a hawk resembles a dove.

And the crowd was just as bewildered at the showing of the natives. They came there fans, from all parts of New England, firm in the belief that the Warriors after winning seven of their eight previous battles with the New Yorkers would continue their victory surge.

When they saw the McKechnie men collapse completely, they were too surprised to even jeer. They just sat there in silence.

Joe Cashman

That is, they sat silent except when young Walter Berger came to bat. He was as good as his mates were and banging out two home runs, to bring his total for the season up to a tie for the league in seven times at bat, and played a swell outfield game in the field. And his every move was cheered lustily.

It was a sorry day for the Tribe, any way you look at it, but it would have been the sorriest ever had not Berger been present.

His home runs, one in the ninth inning of the first game, and the other in the second inning of the nightcap were accompanied by hits which landed high up in the new stands in deep center, and his triple banged against the left field corner.

That great display of hitting on the part of the Coast wonder took considerable sting out of the locals' defeats and made the fans more or less glad that they had attended.

A modern Hub baseball record was made in the third inning of the second game when the Giants scored 12 runs.

They knocked Harry Seibold,

HARVARD CREWS AT RED TOP

New London, Ct., June 2—Harvard's rowing squad arrived at the Red Top training quarters here last night. The third varsity and 150-pound crews, accompanied by Head Coach Charles J. Whitney and the combination coach, Ed Wachter, came direct from Philadelphia, where they rowed Saturday.

The remainder of the squad with the freshman coach, Burt Haines, arrived at Red Top from Cambridge shortly after 7 o'clock, being ferried from New London station in the three coaching launches.

Harvard's quarters have been transformed since the oarsmen were here early last year. The old dining hall has been replaced by a larger and up-to-date building.

The initial workout for the Crimson oarsmen will be held today.

Doeg Takes but Hour to Vanquish Van Ryn

South Orange, N. J., June 2 (INS)—John H. Doeg of Santa Monica, Cal., today faced his defeated opponent with a straight set victory over John Van Ryn of East Orange, accomplishing the same feat in the quarter-finals of the Orange Lawn Tennis club here yesterday.

Doeg flashed the form that had marked his game at its peak a year ago to vanquish the Jersey youth 6—3, 6—3, 6—2. The play lasted less than an hour.

N. Y. Nationals Beat Giants' Eleven, 3-1

New York, June 2—The New York Nationals knocked their better local rivals, the Giants, right out of the New York State cup competition here yesterday by defeating a first-round tie, 3 to 1.

After a scoreless first half the Nationals got busy soon after resuming and rolled up a three-goal lead before the Giants got started to save themselves from a whitewash.

BERGER, BRAVES' HOME RUN KING, SHOWS HOW HE HITS THE BALL FOR ITS LAST, LONG RIDE

Walter Berger, terrific-hitting left fielder of the Tribe, hit his 13th and 14th home runs in the double-header with the Giants yesterday, pwviding the only bright spots in a rather gloomy afternoon forHub fans. In the above specially posed photos, Berger shows his batting stance and the perfect home run grip. Berger is becoming tremendously popular with the fans and promises to rival the great Babe Ruth as a local drawing card. Hub fans are tickled with this lad's stick work.

White Trunks Suggested as Guard Against Fouls

By DAMON RUNYON

New York, June 2 I note in the public prints that James A. Farley, chairman of the New York State athletic commission, has in mind a plan designed as a partial safeguard against fouling in the Schmeling-Stanley fight that is worthy of consideration

Athletic Commissioner Murray Irwin of [illegible] Mr. Farley's plan was frowned upon by the commission was also sound enough, in principle

White trunks show blood too clearly, which is also one objection to white gloves. But it is the only one that furnishes a proper contrast with the dark red gloves used in New York State

It may sound a trifle melodramatic, but the eyes of the European world of sport are on this particular fight, and the spirit of American fair play is more or less involved

I think Sharkey is apt to be given the worst of it, and they refuse to believe that a fighter can get a square deal in the long run here, after the experience of old Phil [illegible] in Miami

By BILL GRIMES

With more than a score of local "tourists" in the field, the first 18-hole round of the Women's Eastern championship will be played today at The Country Club.

Although there are 96 contestants entered, 52 are members of the Women's Golf Association of Boston and about one-half of the local contenders are entirely out of order playing in an Eastern championship.

Bill Grimes

There is not even the remotest chance of fifty per cent of the Hub players breaking 110 at The Country Club.

As the members of the United States Curtis Cup team have not returned from abroad, the Women's Eastern championship lacks class this year.

With such players as Miss Glenna Collett, Miss Maureen Orcutt, Miss Helen Hicks, Mrs. H. A. Martell, Miss Rosalie Knapp and Miss Marion Bennett out of the 54-hole ... for the title, victory will carry little honor and glory to the winner.

Miss Dorothy Richards, Weston, the present district champion; Mrs. Edward H. Baker, Jr., Oakley; Miss Rosamond Vahey, Belmont Spring; Mrs. W. M. Ferris, Jr., Brae Burn, and Miss Grace English, Colonial, are the hopes of the W. G. A.

They are all fine match players and should be right up in the midst of the three-day battle.

Mrs. Baker to Seek Lost Laurels

Due to her experience in championships Mrs. Baker is expected to make the best showing of the local contenders. As she recently lost her W. G. A. crown to Miss Elizabeth Morris, Mrs. Baker will have a double incentive to top the other Women's Golf Association of Boston players. Mrs. Baker is right at home on The Country Club course and she has always scored well at Clyde Park.

Miss Margaret Gordon of Metabunet is on her game she will bear watching, as will Miss Virginia Kenworthy and Mrs. Edward Shay, both from Rhode Island.

The outstanding players from the Metropolitan District are Miss Marie Jenney, of Hudson River, Miss Alexandrina Bishop and Mrs. Brooklawn and Mrs. Courtland Smith, Glenn Ridge, while Philadelphia is playing host to Mrs. R. Stetson, Miss Ruth Perry, Mrs. E. H. H. Fitler, Mrs. J. J. Dosten, Jr., and Miss Elizabeth Morris.

Mrs Stetson and Miss Morris are members of the Huntington Valley Country Club, Miss Perry and Miss Dusten represent the Philadelphia Cricket Club and Mrs. Fitler carries the colors of the Merion Country and Cricket Club.

The Eastern championship will be decided over the 54-hole route, 18 holes each day through Wednesday. At the conclusion of the Eastern, the inter-city matches between New York, Philadelphia and Boston will begin on Thursday.

Greyhound Racing Starts Tomorrow

Greyhound racing will enter upon its second season at the Fair Grounds track, Hinsdale, L. I., tomorrow under the auspices of the National Kennel Club.

Three rounds of the best pedigree greyhounds in the United States and several importations from Great Britain are now quartered at the track awaiting the opening gun which will open the 30 day meeting.

Indians Nose Out Tigers by 3 to 2

Cleveland, June 2 (US)—The Indians nosed out the Tigers in a pitchers battle between Uhle and Harder, the score being 3 to 2.

Morgan's home run in the third inning, when the Indians scored all their runs was the big blow in the Indian attack.

Hudlin relieved Harder for the Indians in the eighth.

Jack Sharkey Will Devote Much Time to Boxing

By JACK SHARKEY
American Heavyweight Champion

Orangeburg, N. Y., June 2—Boxing will receive most of my attention from now until training ends for my 15-round bout with Max Schmeling at the Yankee Stadium on June 12.

I am anxious to sharpen my judgment of distance, increase the snap of my punches and to practice some of the wallops which I plan to use against the German Dempsey.

Road work has built up my wind, while gym exercises and bag punching have tuned up my muscles. I shall continue that condition-building routine, but most attention will be devoted to boxing drills.

It is actual boxing when puts the final touches to every important training session. Clashes with first class sparring partners, such as I have here, will enable me to get a terrific pace for the German from the time the gong sounds for the opening of the first round until the contest ends.

Johnny Grosso and King Solomon head my staff of sparring partners. They are first class men and are capable of giving me strenuous workouts.

Johnny Buckley has signed up several other boxers who will be available if needed.

Sharkey Is Now in Fine Condition

I have conditioned myself—to be sure of whipping Schmeling—very carefully. The fact I have kept in action in the ring has made this training period much easier than it would have been if I had been inactive.

I fought Tommy Loughran in New York last September, while I battled Phil Scott at Miami, Fla., in February. I trained six weeks for each match and so have had plenty of strenuous work.

Between bouts I have lived in the open air, hunting and fishing in the mountains of New Hampshire. This kind of a life is healthful and tends to put and keep a man in good condition.

In some of the stories about my coming match with the German Dempsey it has been said that Max will have youth on his side. He admits he is close to 25. I am only 27, and so am still fairly young.

I have been before the public ever since I defeated Harry Wills three years ago last October, which is probably why some people believe I am older than I really am.

They don't stop to consider that I won from the Black Panther three years from the time I quit the amateurs and started boxing as a pro!

Few heavyweights reach the height of their development until they are 28 years of age.

I am still growing. It is necessary for me to buy a flock of new suits after each bout. The training develops my chest and shoulders. My legs and waistline remain the same.

Tex Rickard once told me I would eventually become a 200 pounder. At the time I did not believe him, but I notice that I am putting on a pound or two of solid fighting weight with each bout.

I weighed 188 pounds when I defeated Wills, while my weight for the Loughran match was 190 pounds.

MAX TO WEIGH UNDER 190 FOR TITLE GO

Endicott, N. Y., June 2—What will Max Schmeling weigh when he crawls through the ropes against Jack Sharkey in the big battle at Yankee Stadium on June 12?

He probably will come from two to five pounds under 190.

Jim Corbett was closer to 180 than 190 the memorable September night he dethroned John L. Sullivan at New Orleans.

Jack Dempsey was closer to 180 than 190 when he hewed down the Tall Pine of the Pottawatamie in the sunbaked arena on Miami bay.

Bob Fitzsimmons weighed less than 180 pounds when he wrested the crown from Corbett at Carson City.

Max Schmeling will be at about the same poundage he was when he cut and slashed Paulino to ribbons in the same ring a year ago, in which he will face Sharkey in a few days hence.

The Teuton scrapper is of the type of young athlete who weight varies little, in training or out of it. He never really is out of training. He landed here from Germany as lean and hard looking as when he left here last year.

When the gong rings at Yankee Stadium on June 12 Schmeling will be a bit under 190 pounds and Sharkey a bit over 190 pounds.

Accept Albina Osipowitch Mark

Berlin, June 2 (AP)—Five marks made recently by Aus... swimmers were accepted as ... world records by the ... Amateur Swimming ... which ended its ... day.

Joseph McKim, Los Angeles A. C. star, set two of these, and Walter Laufer, Chicago; George Kojac, New York; and Albina Osipowitch, Worcester, Mass., accounted for the others.

The federation re-elected virtually all officers and directors and decided to hold the next meeting at Los Angeles in August, 1932. Daniel J. Ferris was the only American delegate present.

The BIG House

By JACK LAIT

her eyes were limpid and half-closed.

"Oh, my Anne, how I love you—how I have loved you! So long—longer than I could tell you—harder than you could understand——"

"And I love you, too, John. I did from the first—and even then it seemed—it—wasn't the first."

She drew herself away from him.

"John, let us be sane for a moment," she said. "You must guide and guard me. I have told you everything now—everything about Dean. The thing that has worried me unspeakably. I have felt that it was my duty to him to wait for him. I did feel that I loved him when he was sent to prison, but long since I have found that I didn't. Until you came I never had the grit to admit this to myself. But, John——"

She laid both hands into his.

"Anyway, now, I could never marry an ex-convict—Oh, it would be too terrible."

If we [illegible] she [illegible] Morgan's soul.

"—never marry an ex-convict"

He was staring at her with eyes which tried to comprehend. At last he had her and he had no right to her. How could he shackle her with the weight of his won stigma? Why had he waited until now, until this moment, to tell her? Why had he been too yellow to give her the truth? His head sank into his hands.

"John — John —" Anne arose, terrified — "what's the matter, John?"

"Don't touch me!" he cried, as he arose and skidded back and forth before her. "Don't come near me, you don't know who I am. I should have told you. Oh, Anne, I meant to tell you. Why did I wait?"

"What—what is it, John? Nothing can matter!"

Anne had caught his arm and her face reflecting her panic was close to his. He stopped and held her away from him. His voice was hard and cold. Passionless now—his voice

"Anne, I am an ex-convict! Not once, but twice. And now I am an escaped convict. I was in the very cell with him. It was through him that I knew of you and made up my mind to hunt you out!"

He paused. Anne was facing him in a dazed manner.

"I found you and all this happiness—a home—things I had never known before. It all changed me. It made me see everything with new, clean eyes, from a new angle—on women, on everything, Anne. I'm sorry I made you love me. The Big House couldn't hold me in when I wanted something; Anne could you?"

He was pleading.

"You mean—we had no right to make love—it was my fault, too," Anne's voice was empty, colorless. Her hands hung listlessly to her sides. Her mind was lifeless and there was a strange, ghastly look in her eyes.

"You think you can forgive me?"

"Yes"

"And forget?

"Yes."

"And I'll go away—far away—to the Hawaiian Islands."

"Yes."

"And the thoughts of you always will keep me straight, Anne—always. Good-by."

He turned and stumbled away, and didn't look back. Anne stood in the same spot. When he had rounded the corner of the house she piped an inarticulate moan and sank to the ground. Her mother's voice, cheerful, teasing and benign, called

"You children must not forget to turn that ice cream freezer. It must be hard and cold."

"Hard, hard!" gasped Anne, inaudibly.

He couldn't find it.

Duncan Morgan walked all the way into the city. He was hatless and there was a loco look in his eyes. People turned and stared after him. But he walked alone, with no one near him, for he heeded not a soul. Everything in him seemed numb . . . . When his thoughts were on that dizzy trek he could never afterward remember. He did not think.

He had left Anne groggy on the ground and he, himself, was unconscious—yet he had control of his muscles. How useless they were now—what strength had they lent him in his greatest crisis?

He gained his room somehow and flopped across the bed. He lay there for hours, inert, unable to move, not caring whether he was alive or dead. How long he remained like that he did not know but finally he was aroused by his landlady, who handed him a telegram.

He stared at it through blind eyes, and then slowly opened it. He glanced to the end first, and saw it was from Anne.

He read:

"JOHN WHY DID SOL LEAVE ME I DIDN'T KNOW WHAT I WAS SAYING NOTHING MATTERS MAN I LOVE YOU COME TOMORROW FORGET TONIGHT NO DONT FORGET TONIGHT. ANNE."

Morgan sat on the edge of his bed and gazed into space. What should he do? Had he the right to subject her to life such as he could give her—the life of a hunted outlaw? If they could go away and begin life anew! But would the gang and the bloodhounds let them? "Nothing matters man," she had written—and she had meant it.

He had no idea of the time, but after hours of uncertainty he fell back on the bed and sank in to a violent slumber. He was awakened by a loud knocking. It was daylight without.

"Mr. Everett," a voice called. He went to the door.

"There is a young lady to see you—she says she must talk to you."

"I'll be right down," Morgan answered.

He threw some water on his face and combed his hair. His eyes were bloodshot and swollen. His heart was going like a runaway engine.

Downstairs he found Ruby.

"My God, Dunk, get out of this burg, quick—they're goin' to put you on the spot tonight."

"Yeah?" slowly enunciated Morgan, in a tone of distaste. "And why are they goin' to put me on the spot?"

"They blue-printed it last night. They got an idea that you are bargaining with the district attorney to turn up the whole gang an' get a pardon. They'll give you the mercy o' Judas. Take it on the lam!"

"Ruby, I can't go—now."

"My God, Dunk, you've GOT to go! Don't you understand who I mean? They're going to settle you!"

"Yes, I know, but it's too late. I'll see them and talk to them—they can't do this—not to Dunk!"

"The boat has sailed, Dunk, and if you did they'd know I shed you and they'd croak you. Dapper Danny said okay, an that's the last word."

"Well, let them go through—maybe it's best after all."

"Ain't you got no fight left in you?" Ruby was disgusted.

"No. I'll take it—I'll straighten out a lot of things."

"Come on, snap out of it—Dunk!"

Ruby was aggressive—insistent. She tore at him by the arms and looked into his sad, listless, chin-down face.

MISS HARD-BOILED by Jane Dixon

Pancho's Bandits Hustle Lily Out of Town at Raquel's Warning

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Raquel Rojas, in flight from her home in Hermosa on the Mexican border, has taken a train headed for Phoenix, Ariz. As she rides, her thoughts turn to Hermosa, to the romantic Jack Farrell, whom she loves; to Bill Johnson, whom she jilted; to Lily, the singer at Keno Joe's place, the Eldorado cabaret; to her father, Pancho Spanish gentleman by birth, Mexican bandit by profession. Now, sitting in the train, she recalls how she rushed to her father from Keno Joe's place to warn him that the police were after him.

CHAPTER 5

A great hunk of a cattleman half-way up in the rattling day coach had noticed Raquel. He was ogling her. His moon eyes, in the shadow of his sombrero, were searching and avid for the beauty of her.

Raquel did not flinch under his fatuous gaze. She held his eyes firm, flashing him a message of cold repulsion. His face reddened. His eyes wavered.

All men were cowards. Except, perhaps, Jack Farrell.

Pancho, her father was a coward. A heavy-fisted craven. How fear had drained the flush of the fiery tequila from his face the night she threw herself upon him and cried to him that he must go away, quickly, while there was time. She called the scene, back there in Hermosa.

Lily had turned traitor. Lily was going to give him up to the law. And hadn't she, Raquel, always told him and hadn't Lucy, her mother, also told him he would come to a good end, scheming always with low peons?

Pancho had cursed and cringed and clamped about the shack in a panic of fear and rage.

Then as abruptly as Raquel herself had jumped from the crumbling adobe wall beyond the Eldorado, Pancho shot out of the Rojas shack.

Noiselessly Raquel followed, stalking him at a distance.

It was as she hoped. Pancho entered an adobe hut with barred windows at the far end of the long street. In he inside those blackhearted compañeros of evil—drinking tequila and boasting of their crimes. Crimes that were to be, and crimes that were to be. Then well," she told herself, she crouched down behind a wine at a corner of the hut.

Raquel Spies on Rustlers' Hut

How long her vigil had lasted she could not guess. She only knew that from the hips down, her legs were numb. Her body ached with the tension of cramped muscles. She dared not move. A mouse even might bring one of the band down on her. And these men would be in no mood for paisley Skulking there—they would strike first, discover afterward. Just to breathe was a knife in her breast. She must do something. Another minute of this agony was an unthinkable horror.

The door in the middle of the hut scraped along the hard dirt floor. Someone was drawing it inward. A man slouched to where the path leading to the hut met the lane. He stood mixed slowly, left to right, describing almost a complete circle. He whistled softly, and shambled down the lane in direction of the town.

A few more minutes and two men, from the cabin repeated his performance. Then two more. Then one, locking the door after him. Six in all. Something significant was about to happen.

Raquel followed the last man at a safe distance. As she anticipated, the way led straight to the Eldorado. It was getting late. Through the open door she could see Keno Joe's place was deserted save for the members of the band, the rotund Joe himself and Lily.

No, there were two others. A stranger, tall and slender sitting at a table with Jud Thomkins, reputed owner of rich silver mines in Zacatecas. The stranger's table was near the door. His back was toward Raquel. She could not see his face.

Raquel heard Pancho, her father, call Lily to join him and his companions. Drinks all around. Once Twice Three times.

"How about some of that cognac, Joe?"

Pancho was feeling expansive. A luxury, cognac. A rich man's indulgence. Kept under lock and key beneath the roof.

Joe nodded his round bald head He went to fetch the cognac

No sooner had his short fat body disappeared up the stairs than the scene in the room underwent a swift change. As if a magician's wand had been waved over it.

Pancho Rojas and his companions were on their feet. A command snapped out.

Glint of Steel Holdup at Keno's

Raquel saw the glint of steel. Lily was struggling to pull away A dark hand clamped over her mouth. They were binding her. A dirty red bandana handkerchief replaced the hand over her mouth Another knotted her hands behind her. Her straw-colored hair, rumpled in the struggle, stuck out fantastically in thin wisps and curls.

The two men at the table near the door had risen and stepped back against the wall. Raquel guessed they were unarmed. But whether they were or not, they must have known there was no use in argument.

"Easy now, Lily," Pancho warned. We just kind of decided, me and my friends here, that this town of Hermosa is not any too good for you. Thought you might like a change of air. We aim to help you get it. Well take you across the border tonight and see you get on a train in the morning. You're headin' south, Lily. Reckon not so stop till you get to Torreon. Or Mexico City."

Lily's knees gave way under her. Two of the band supported her toward the door.

"And Lily," Pancho called after her, "it'll be plumb foolish of you to come back any time whatsoever. Some of us don't feel here knows who is is you're shieldin' that shot Pascal Pares in the back. So you'd better not show up here again!"

The two "escorts" were almost at the door now, half dragging, half carrying their unwilling burden.

An impulse to step inside, to give the lilip of her presence to this unfolding play seized Raquel. She gave way to it.

She stood, straight and slim, the stillness of her form into startling relief by the dusky curtain of night outside the door. A half smile gave an upward curve to the crimson bow of her lips through which her teeth, closed tightly, shone blue-white. A spray of purple bougainvillea from the vine under which she had waited was caught in the black swirl of her hair. She might have been a bacchante, piquante, eager for the feast.

"Hard-Boiled" Stranger Interested

The "escorts" had brought Lily to the door. Raquel moved aside that they might pass. Lily's rolling, protruding eyes were arrested by the apparition of youth and beauty and smiling approbation, which confronted her and instantly caped from under the dirty red bandana. Her lips body stiffened.

"I'll tell Bill Johnson you were in such a hurry to leave you couldn't stop to bid him goodbye," Raquel lilted after the trio "Good luck, Lily, my fat trussed hen."

She heard a voice behind her. The voice of the stranger murmuring to Jud Thomkins.

"Who is she?" it said. "She's beautiful. Beautiful as a dream. Not hard-boiled. And look!"

Raquel was sped slowly, swaying with the lithe grace of a young sapling, toward the group of evil-looking men standing with her father at the table

"Well done, Pancho," she said. "Come on. The play is over. Time we went home."

The men were parceling, holstering their guns. Keno Joe came wheezing down the stairs with the cognac.

"A treat for the men, Joe," ordered Raquel. "Pancho's coming with me."

"Where's Lily" Joe wanted to know.

"Lily's gone for a ride. It was too hot in here for her."

This Day in Our History

This is the anniversary of the beginning of the reign of terror in France, June 2, 1793. During it life the wildest excesses were committed in the name of the people. This was the beginning of the end of royalty.

A LOVEly Landscape -:- -:- Drawn by Nell Brinkley

Two rich pictures hung side by side in a gallery. Wide gold frames shut the world out, separating the landscapes from their surroundings, so that the one who looked seemed to look out of a window upon some lovely land.

One was a startling arrangement of masses of color. Color that took the innocent one aback. Two dear old ladies, who were gay young flutterers when balloon sleeves of bright plaid were in, studied it. They saw it first two feet from their noses. "Strange," said one, amiably. "I don't seem to see what it is, Martha." Drawing farther away, two gray heads together, the gay splash of paint began to materialize into a picture.

"Wonderful," cried Martha. "You see it now, my dear? Quite wonderful. Of course, he did it intentionally. But I can't quite say I like these things. Do you?" And the other old darling said, "N-n-n-no. Can't say I really do. I don't want to be an old fogey, but I call it trickey." "Beautiful color, though, eh?" said Martha, anxious to placate the unknown modernist, whose jewel they were presuming to find a flaw in Apologizing to some worker who did not care, for finding his offspring less than perfect. Youth could do well to cut their manners a bit after the kindly and thoughtful ones of the older "boys and girls."

Then Martha and her friend saw the other one Just a "picture" Plain to see; old fashioned, in that it told a story, and each line and flower and face was carefully drawn, each color laid on tenderly, and as exactly fully as a Meissonier. There were birds in it, flowers, moonlight, the blue and lavender of shadow and shine on marble balustrades—and LOVERS, with Eros in the background with a violin!

Martha and her friend got their glasses settled again. Two old rose-leaf cheeks on two old faces puffed tight with smiles, four old blue eyes beamed; and says Martha to her friend, crossing one gloved hand over the other and laying her head on one side, "Now THAT'S what I call a LOVELY picture."—NELL BRINKLEY.

How to Keep Well

By DR R. S COPELAND

Accidents Due to Fatigue

There is no doubt that a large number of accidents are due to carelessness They are met in industrial life among the thousands who go to business every day in the great cities and on the high ways With the popular use of automobiles a number of accidents increasing and so alarming a rate

With the growing use of machinery in the mills as well as the large industries there are greater hazards in life and limb The need of caution in general extends to leisure hours and to the time of recreation It is a time of day school children, office workers and laborers are on their way home after a hard day's work.

Judge has a great deal to do with accidents. When you are tired you are less alert, less watchful of danger and more indifferent to it.

There can be no doubt that in any calling where strenuous effort is required accidents are sure to be more frequent during the period of greatest fatigue. There are other factors, of course, but we must consider this one.

There is a limit to human endurance. The limitation of bodily and mental power must be frequently met. It is not good for anybody to work as hard or in such a form of work as to be habitually tired A certain amount of fatigue is good for everybody, but beyond a certain point it does not build, but tears out. Not alone does it make you more liable to accident, but it is bad for the heart and for the nervous system

Dr Copeland

Safety devices, safety measures and "safety first" publicity have lessened the dangers to some extent But in spite of them the rate of increase in accidents is appalling

Soft Chiffons Good Travelers

By ANN ARDEN

(Ann Arden broadcasts latest style news over WHDH every Tuesday and Thursday at 11 a. m.)

A MUCH traveled young person was extolling the virtues of chiffon evening things for extended trips—she had found them indispensable abroad. Completing her eulogy, though, she ruefully admitted that one time she had hung her dinner frock in a steaming shower too long, only to take it forth with the sad discovery that it was half the length it had been!

IT IS true that chiffon is an exceedingly good traveler. It packs well, does not take up much space, is appropriate for innumerable occasions; and lastly, it can be made to look like new by merely being shaken out when unpacked. Steaming lightly will remove wrinkles, but take warning of excess from the young lady just mentioned above

* * *

YOU FORTUNATES who are embarking this summer have an unusually charming collection of chiffons for choice. There are any number of the two-time sort of creations. They do so smartly for both afternoon and evening wear. Some have brief capes that expect long gloves, others employ new versions of the jacket Some come in lovely satin colors in soft flat crêpe pastels. Still others delightfully ally themselves with lace, that other good traveling companion.

FOR SHIPBOARD nights, for the first thrilling encounters with Paris night life, for dreamy Viennese waltzes—or as a delightful consolation for the stay-at-home, what could be more attractive than the ruffled, flower-sprinkled frock pictured, suitable for formal afternoon, or informal evening wearing" Of chiffon in cool tones of yellow and green, three deep skirt ruffles, brill of material at normal waistline, and cape over shoulders, edged in narrow accenting ruffle. Silver slippers are worn, "Court" jewelry necklace and bracelets of rhinestones set in silver, and a lovely evening bag, embroidered in gold and pastel colors, completes a costume of much charm and versatility.

PASTE PIECES and rhinestones set to copy real jewelry are in charming harmony with current evening frocks that borrow from the past.

SIXTEEN to twenty button gloves in white powder pink eggshell and black are fashion's very best for evening.

SHALL WE be lily-white all summer—and carry parasols for the sake of delicate beauty? Perhaps—since fashions seem to be getting girlier every day!

Correct Manners .:. .:. by Mrs. Beeckman

Wearing Long Gloves

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you kindly tell me if it is proper, when one is attending a banquet and dance in formal attire, to keep long white kid gloves on all during the evening, even when eating and dancing? Of course, I mean with the hand of the glove rolled up and just on one's arm?

ANNE.

While you are dining, you should remove the gloves—remove them, not turn in the hand of the glove. During the dancing, you may either wear them——this is the more formal thing to do, of course—or not wear them, as you wish. Or you may wear them during the first part of the evening, and later, when after much dancing it is not comfortable to wear them, take them off and leave them with your wraps. In any case, it is not attractive or in good form to turn in the hands of the gloves.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.)

Cozy Kitchenette Cooking for Two

From Martha Lee's Monday Morning Broadcast Over WHDH, the Boston Evening American

Whenever I see recipes that call for "a pound of spaghetti" or "two cups of rice" I have a pang for a special friend of mine, an inexperienced little kitchenette cook, who may try these large family quantities and find that she has scarcely enough dishes to hold the production!

Martha Lee

I haven't forgotten the pound of butter she managed I once purchased, for the economic ness of the tongue I blithely gave an upward curve to the crimson bow of her lips through which her teeth, closed tightly, shone blue-white. A spray of purple bougainvillea from the vine under which she had waited was caught in the black swirl of her hair. She might have been a bacchante, piquante, eager for the feast.

The Beauty Box

—F. HELEN TOLLETT—

CELLS in nine cases out of ten is caused by over-indulgence in fattening foods. Many plump damsels declare that they eat very little. Mebbe so. But that little may be the kind of food that piles on adipose tissue. Butter must be avoided, starches should be cut down to the limit and sugar in concentrated form is absolutely forbidden. Lean meats, fish vegetables that grow above ground, fresh and cooked fruits form a balanced and healthful diet and will not add to the avoirdupois.

Clinching the teeth with displeasure and pulling the chin inward when expressing disapproval are two bad facial habits. They make the jaw prominent, develop a double chin, take tone and elasticity from the muscles of the neck. As women grow older they drop these habits usually. They find out that there's not much in life worth all the teeth clinching and chin depressing. A great deal of chinning goes on and most of it is about nothing. It does not pay a cent of wage or interest money. Wholly profitless. In fact, a total loss.

EVENING AMERICAN MARKETS

New York Stocks — News of Street

STOCK MARKET FEATURED BY DULLNESS

New York, June 2—Dullness featured dealings today on the New York Stock Exchange. With trading generally resumed after the triple holiday, price trends were vague and unconvincing, as transactions were light. The holiday apparently failed to restore either the courage or the vigor of speculation among the public and the latter stood aloof.

Business surveys and analyses appearing over the week-end were on the whole, reassuring, but with little general investment interest until late summer or early fall, speculators remained unenthusiastic.

KENNECOTT RAIDED

The slashing of the Kennecott Copper annual dividend from $5 to $1 had been expected for some time, but Wall Street generally will be a few months and some annual statements to be disposed this month, all of which tends to discourage ambitious stock market activity.

Some commission houses are telling their clients that selected stocks are in a bargain counter and are pointing out that the market usually forecasts business improvement some months in advance. The fact remains, however, that spring, however welcome, brings no fresh impetus to the trends of most trading.

Business news is mixed. Thus, the copper dividend cut, the latest announcement of price reductions by Ford Motor, which, on top of recent reductions by Chrysler and Packard, tended to hold the motor shares in check.

Rails continued to sag, for with the unsatisfactory April earnings reports out of the way, indications are that May reports will show scant improvement. President Storey of the Atchison said he saw prospects of improvement in traffic when new grain begins to move late in June.

MAY SALES RISE.

The most pleasing news coming to hand over the week-end was the May sales report of Montgomery-Ward, showing an unexpectedly large gain. The weekly mercantile reviews had not been particularly encouraging during the past month. The report brought substantial buying into Montgomery-Ward, and Sears Roebuck was firm in sympath).

Chain store issues made moderate gains in sympathy with the mail order houses, and utilities were again well supported, as well as some of the industrial specialties and chemicals.

Eastman Kodak rose several points, and shares of 2 other more included Air Reduction, Colorado Fuel, Allied Chemical, American Water Works, Electric Bond & Share, United Cigar, Amerada and Ingersoll Rand. Celotex sold up a couple of points in response to dismissal of the receivership suit.

The Kennecott dividend action had been too widely discounted to have much influence on the copper shares. Case dropped 12 points, apparently under bear pressure. Of Westinghouse Pump declined several points. Foster Wheeler, Westinghouse, International Harvester and Columbian Carbon were also under pressure.

Some of the steel specialties were bid up moderately during the last hour, particularly those identified with pipe manufacturing. Republic rose nearly 4 points and gains of around 2 points were recorded by A. M. Byers, U. S. Pipe, Vanadium, McKeesport and Myer & Bros. Continental Baking A clipped off more than 2 points.

The closing tone was steady.

SEES BUSINESS FUTURE BRIGHT

Washington, June 2 (U.S.)—Increasing confidence in the future Improving prospects for capital A continuing expansion in the construction programs forecast last December.

These are the high points of the United States present industrial and business condition, Julius H. Barnes, chairman of President Hoover's national business survey conference, declared yesterday.

Barnes, one of the nation's leading economic authorities, pointed out two important financial trends which he indicated point to increasing prosperity.

1. Continued large capital improvements supported by large-scale financing, which evidence a confidence in enlarged future earning power and preparation for it.

2. In America and Europe evidence of increasing ease and accumulated credit with consequent decreases in interest rates, and resulting benefits to production and distribution.

For the period ending May 23, 1930, total building contracts for all classes were only slightly under the figure for the same period last year, being $1,826,000,000 as compared with $2,310,000,000. Additional contracts for concrete laying, largely in the field of road building, however, more than made up for this drop.

Other highway construction was considerably more than doubled in the period, and increases are noticeable in building alteration work.

Expenditure by class 1 railroads in the first quarter of the year 1930 were $226,000,000, compared with $127,000,000 in the same period of 1929.

NEW ENGLAND INDUSTRIES

Through exchange of its stock for that of York Manufacturing Co. of Saco, Me., considerable interest is focused on New England Industries, Inc., the new Maine industrial organization. With the progress of New England Public Service Co. in development of its transmission line extension for increased and improved power supply, it became apparent that industries upon which the communities of northern New England and the electric light and power business depend must be given attention and, sometimes, substantial assistance.

Nation-wide distress in the cotton industry is well known. In Maine it was realized that certain changes in policy and management might save the cotton mills there and put them on a paying basis. There also seemed to be certain opportunities for development of new industries, provided the proper people could be interested.

In order to bring this about New England Public Service Co. organized New England Industries, Inc., early this year. About a quarter of its capital was furnished by the utility company and the balance from outside New England. This new unit purchased from the utility company four textile companies and interests in other manufacturing companies and expects to retain them, adding to its holdings from time to time as it becomes practical and necessary. The four textile mills are Edwards Manufacturing Co., Hill Manufacturing Co., Bates Manufacturing Co. and Androscoggin Mills. It also owns Main Seaboard Paper Co. and practically all the capital of another large industry. The cotton mills which have been under the N. E. Public Service-N. E. Industries management the longest are showing decided signs of improvement. One of them has operated at 100 per cent for more than two years and is making a fair profit on its capital.

CANTY STUDIES FILM WORLD OVERSEAS

By FRANK H. MELOON

George R. Canty of Boston, former mayor's secretary at City Hall, is now engaged in compiling European film statistics at Paris for the U. S. Department of Commerce. The entire European field is thoroughly and intelligently covered by Mr. Canty. In his latest report he tells of the opening of a film school in Paris, where Geo. R. Canty sound will be trained for the "talkies."

Mr Canty states the "talkies" are succeeding so well overseas that, despite the difficulties of obtaining anything like a regular supply of native language "talkies," practically every European cinema is equipped for them. Also a big increase in profits. A typical example is the case of Norway, where receipts have increased at least 15 per cent since the coming of sound.

National war on stock frauds, under auspices of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, is designed to put fraudulent stock salesmen out of business. Losses through sales of fraudulent stocks at present are estimated all the way from half a billion to a billion and a half annually. Past attempts to suppress fraudulent stock sales have not met with any notable success.

A plan is advanced which has worked well in Rochester, N. Y. That is the creation of a board of investors' protective committees to serve stock reformers and to test their validities. The plan is feasible, but is surrounded by numerous obstacles. Certainly much would be needed to maintain such a committee.

As the law stands at present there is no way to punish swindling selling stocks across state lines by wire or telephone. State laws cover only sales made within the borders of states, and federal laws are applied only to fraudulent use of the mails.

Views of leaders regarding the needs of the situation vary. Henry R. Hayes, investment banker, says:

"The need of the moment is checking securities frauds, which are costing the public many millions annually, is more effectively co-operation. The states are dealing with the local aspects of the problem, but the main attack must be dealt with by the national business and private organizations in connection with federal authorities. This will require further legislation. It merely a question of the more effective enforcement of existing laws against fraud."

John J. O'Connor, finance manager of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, says:

"Education of the public is the prime basic we face. At first inquiries about specific stocks are received only after the losses have occurred, but when the public is aware of the wide distribution of fraudulent securities it makes inquiries before buying."

$2,000,000 Boston Loan Is Awarded

City Treasurer Edmund L. Dolan awarded a $2,000,000 loan, dated June 3, 1930, and payable October 3, 1930, interest-to-follow 365-day year basis, to Day Trust Company at 2.625 per cent. Other bidders were: First National-Old Colony Corporation, 2.64 per cent plus $7.50; Salomon Brothers & Hutzler, 2.68 per cent plus $37, and Shawmut Corporation, 2.768 per cent.

Advice Is Free

Before you buy or sell stocks or bonds, you ought to secure unbiased expert advice. Send your investment inquiries with stamp to Frank H. Meloon, Financial Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston. All replies are sent by mail direct.

NO INCOME

C. H., Worcester—I am a savings bank depositor, somewhat interested in the stock market.—A friend suggested Radio. Do you approve?

Ans.—Though Radio Corporation is a leader in its line, earnings have not yet warranted an initial dividend on the common stock. Regular payments, however, are maintained on both classes of preferred. In 1929 net for the common was $3.38 a share, compared with $3.19 in 1928. As a "savings bank depository" you are not in position to speculate. Don't disturb your fund unless you buy securities for income.

INVEST $3000.

F. A., Boston—I own 20 shares Electric Power & Light first preferred and 100 Republic Steel preferred. I have $4000 in a savings bank, which I want to invest. Please advise.

Ans.—Invest only $3000. Under present business conditions $2000 is the most much for the savings bank. A $2000 purchase of S. W. Straus first mortgage 6s will give you an annual income of $120. They are sound. Keep your stocks. Dividends are well covered by earnings

SHOULD GET INCOME

H. H., Maynard—I am a wage earner, with dependents. I want to buy stock and someone suggested United Corporation. Is that all right?

Ans.—Though regular dividends are paid on United Corporation preferred, the common stockholder has nothing. To that extent it is a speculation. The company, organized in January, 1929, has minority interest in several large public utilities. Net for 1929 was 49 cents a share; in the first quarter of current year, 33 cents a share. Official statement indicates that it plans for the acquisition of stocks of certain public utilities were consummated an initial dividend of 50 cents a share would be distributed in the fall to be followed by an annual rate of 75 cents in 1931. However, no dividend date has been set. In your circumstances, you should buy securities for income. What is the extent of your surplus?

HOUSTON OIL

F. P. P., Topsfield—Having a substantial backlog of bonds and preferred stocks, as per inventory list, do you think I should buy 100 shares of Houston Oil Co.? My broker advised me against it when it was 10 points lower.

Ans.—The issue, purchase of which we suggested when it was 40 points below its present price, is still regarded by us as a reasonably good speculation. It is not, however, the only natural gas issue with an appealing outlook, and more price enhancement might be looked for in certain issues which have not risen so speedily in recent months.

U. S. EXPORTS OF FOODS ARE INCREASED

Washington, June 2—Exports of U. S. foodstuffs direct to the European market registered a distinct gain during the past year, according to the Foodstuffs Division, Department of Commerce. The total value of all foodstuffs shipped to Europe during 1929 was $430,446,521 in comparison with $422,605,225 in the previous year, an increase of approximately $8,000,000.

The three outstanding classes of foodstuffs exported to Europe are grain and grain preparations, which comprise 31.9 per cent of the total; fruits and fruit preparations, aggregating 21.3 per cent, and edible animal oils and fats amounting to 20.1 per cent. The percentages remain in the same relative position as in 1928.

The United Kingdom was the leading customer during 1929 with a total of more than $200,000,000. Germany and the Netherlands followed in second and third place respectively, Germany receiving $75,000,000 and the Netherlands with 49,011,651. Other leading markets, in order of importance, were: Belgium, Italy, Denmark, France, Sweden, Norway, Greece, Finland, Irish Free State, Spain, Poland and Danzig.

The value of grains and grain preparations exported directly to Europe amounted to $137,571,000 during 1929, compared with $143,649,000 in 1928. The value of grain shipped via Canada and which is not included in the above figures, approximates another $75,000,000 during 1928; no data is yet available for 1929. Wheat and wheat flour, barley and oats are the leading varieties exported, with the United Kingdom the principal market.

Hams and shoulders continue to be the principal variety of meat exports, the United Kingdom alone taking 221,707,000 during 1929 out of a total of $222,173,000 exported to all Europe, or $27,180,000 via the entire world. Bacon and pickled pork are next in importances with the United Kingdom again the leading purchaser. Lard exports to Europe during 1929 aggregated 617,949,000 pounds, with a value of $78,323,000, an increase of 9.7 per cent in quantity and 7.4 per cent in value, measured with 1928.

There is a growing demand in European markets for American canned fruits, pears and peaches leading in importance. During 1929 exports in 606,000 reached a total value of $26,268,000, compared with $22,523,000 in 1928 and $31,365,000 for the world trade of 1929.

COPPERS CUT DIVIDENDS

Kennecott Copper Co., one of the largest copper producing companies in the world, today declared a quarterly dividend of 75 cents, placing the company on a $3 annual basis instead of $5, the previous rate. The dividend is payable July 1 on stock of record June 16.

The action of the directors in Kennecott was forecast earlier in the day, when it was announced that two of its subsidiaries, the Utah Copper Co. and the Nevada Consolidated Copper Corp., had cut their dividend rates in half.

Several of the smaller producers have officially announced their dividends during the past month, reflecting the reduction in copper prices to the lowest level of a pound.

The Anaconda Copper Mining Company, the other leading producer, declared a dividend its rate. Kennecott, together with its subsidiaries, constitutes the largest producing group, but Anaconda is the largest producer from mines directly owned.

Childs Re-enters Field of Business

New York, June 2—C. F. Childs, founder, and for 17½ years president of C. F. Childs Co., has entirely severed his connection with that company. He has not been engaged actively in the business since May, 1928. At that time he sold the controlling stock of that company, which is now controlled through stock ownership by the Goldman Sachs Trading Corp.

Mr. Childs is again entering business and for that purpose has organized Childs Securities Corp which will operate a trading business in all phases of securities including a department specializing in U. S. Government and municipal stock and management a general investment service.

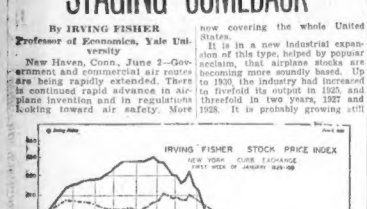
America's Airmindedness Grows to Major Proportions, Says Fisher

AIRPLANE INDUSTRY IS STAGING 'COMEBACK'

By IRVING FISHER
Professor of Economics, Yale University

New Haven, Conn., June 2—Government and commercial air routes are being rapidly extended. There is continued rapid advance in airplane invention and in regulations looking toward air safety. More now covering the whole United States.

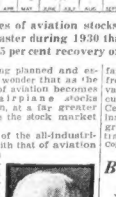
It is in a new industrial expansion of this type, helped by popular acclaim, that airplane stocks are becoming more soundly based. Up to 1930, the industry had increased its fivefold its output in 1925, and threefold in two years, 1927 and 1928. It is probably growing still faster this year, if we may judge from the rate of increase in stock values for the 1930 portion of the curve in the accompanying chart. Certainly, compared with the original growth of steam railroads, the growth of this latest means of transport is satisfactory.



Average prices of aviation stocks on the New York Curb Exchange rise faster during 1930 than during the boom period of 1929, with 40.5 per cent recovery of values lost during the crash.

Airports are being planned and established. Small wonder that as the practical value of aviation becomes more evident a rise in airstocks should rise again, at a far greater rate than before the stock market crash.

A comparison of the all-industrials curb index with that of aviation stocks is in point. All industrial stocks on the Curb Stock Exchange fell, on the average, by 33.1 per cent from the high of 242.9 (1926 equals 100) on July 12, 1929, to the low of the following November 15, when they stood at 162.4. Since then they have recovered from their loss by only 6 per cent to 175.3 on May 16, 1930. But the aviation curb group, which had risen to 880.0 on June 28, 1929, crashed to 329.6 on December 4, with a loss of 66.7 per cent. It then rose to 704.2 on April 11, 1930, then receded together with most other stocks in the general reaction, rose again, and on May 16, last, the index stood at 596.7, representing a net recovery from loss by the crash of 40.5 per cent—as against only 16 per cent recovery for the all-industrials curb index.



Irving Fisher

The airplane industry was found last year to be overproducing. Drastic cuts were made in output schedules. The weak companies were eliminated by failure or merging. Costs were pared. Fare rates were heavily reduced. The result has been sounder financing and increased patronage. The companies are carrying full loads of passengers and sometimes even sections. But the present general rate of 5 cents a mile is not profitable, and the earnings of the industry are largely from airmail contracts and merchandise expressage.

RECEIPTS IMPROVED.

Receipts have improved. Yet the rapid rate of increase in stock values is not from present profits, but from expected future gains. A Diesel engine, adding to air safety against fire and interference with radio communication, and operating cheaply with crude fuel, has been made commercially possible. The airmail rate of five cents an ounce has been popularized, with greatly increased business. It is being predicted that eventually most first class mail will be carried by planes, leaving the slower rail transit for second and third class mail. Improved instruments and radio have improved directional control and eliminated hazards. The new air commerce regulations are surrounding air lines engaged in the scheduled transportation of passengers with a safe uniformity of operation like that enjoyed by major railroads and steamship lines.

Today the 25,000 miles of established airways, over which 83,000 miles a day are flown, with stops at more than 200 cities, are giving a constantly safer service to an area occupied by 90,000,000 people. Col. Lindbergh predicts improved schedules by which it will be possible to reach almost any destination without using other means of transportation, he adds:

"We can look forward to much higher speeds than we have at present. More efficient engines, reduced structural weight and better aerodynamic design will all contribute, and the possibilities of high altitude flying are as yet practically untouched."

AMERICANS LINKED.

It was by high altitude flight that Lindbergh recently broke the record for the transcontinental trip, and stated the service that will link the North and South American republics by way of the west coast, supplementing the east coast facilities. This service will bring mails in seven days between New York, Chicago, Boston, Montreal and other North American cities on the one hand and Montevideo and Buenos Aires in South America on the other. In fact, it will connect

Big U. S. Order for Martin Plane Plant

New York, June 2—The Navy Department has awarded the Glenn L. Martin Co. a contract for 25 flying boats and spare parts, an order which amounts to $1,400,000.

The company reports that this addition to unfilled orders on the books brings its total to more than $4,000,000, which will keep its plants busy until May, 1931. Orders on hand, together with prospects for additional business, place the company in a strong position.

Business Background and Market Summary

New York stock prices up; rate of return steady; value of tradings down. Purchasing power of the dollar, to the farmer down. Wholesale commodity prices down. Raw materials down.

Stock prices were again on the upward move last week, with the total value of tradings off.

Commodity prices continue to drop. Details appear elsewhere on this page.

HUGE RADIO SHOW OPENS IN ATLANTIC CITY

The Annual Convention Draws 30,000 Delegates

An innovation in this year's Radio Manufacturers Trade show, opening today at Atlantic City will be the use of individual demonstration rooms in connection with the open displays of each of the 200 or more exhibitors. For some years past the larger radio shows have been weirdly silent.

The show will be held in the new $15,000,000 civic auditorium, and it is expected that fully 30,000 dealers, manufacturers and distributors will be in attendance in the course of the week.

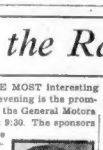
At the Radio Dial

ONE OF THE MOST interesting features of the evening is the promised program of the General Motors Family Party at 9:30. The sponsors have had the thought of the Ford car, time payments, debts and Ford's anti-Semitic campaign. Regarding the latter topic, the humorist stated that Ford apologized to the Jews when he saw them riding in Chevrolets.



George Gershwin

CHIC SALE struck a different note entirely. He was the whole show last night, with the aid of a female foil, instead of having a sizeable cast of assistants as on previous broadcasts. The skit was a hilarious and breathless description of Wheel Wilkins' quick wit in sawing off the leg of an old fellow who had stamped through the floor in a rage over an item in the local print. The leg was wooden, of course. Chic's description of the old man chasing his enemy along the streets, with the good leg in the gutter and the sawed-off leg following the the curb, was ridiculously funny.

WILLIAM E. BORAH should take to the air once a week. This old war horse always has something to say, and he isn't afraid to say it. Last night in the Collier Hour he leaned somewhat to forensic oratory in describing the democracy of ancient Athens as idealized in history. He traced the increasing complexity of democratic forms of government, and then launched into an attack against political machines and an appeal to the young men of the land to stand out against them.

"We have many political machines in this country," he said. "And many of them are corrupt. But this is no reason why young men of independence and courage should not go into politics.

"If you have a message, the people will crowd the streets to listen. The machine will crawl before you.

"Do not be afraid of being called a radical just because you are unwilling to barter away your conscience for the sake of party regularity. Young men always have been the challenge of the statu quo. Their motto is progress rather than regularity, humanity rather than party politics."

BETTERMENT IN BUSINESS IS NOTED

Although business volume of the Container Corporation of America has been below 1929, there has been a slow but consistent improvement since January 1, according to Walter P. Paepcke, president. Regarding current earnings, Mr. Paepcke said:

"Our April profits were the best of any month thus far this year. From present indications, earnings for May and June will be comparable to those for April, and the net income for the second quarter should be materially in excess of last year's second quarter. In making comparisons with last year, it must be remembered that prices for our various products are now generally lower than they have been for any time since 1914; and even more important than this, our volume thus far in 1930 is distinctly off from the same period of 1929.

"For the first twenty weeks of this year our paperboard mills have averaged less than 66 per cent of capacity as against 78 per cent operations for all of 1929. Our earnings at the present time, therefore, are not at all indicative of what this company can do in more normal times of general business.

"On account of continued reduction of cost which we will have for the balanced this year, our earnings should continue to improve during the second half of the year."

The company reported net income of $100,149 for the second quarter of 1929. The improvement predicted by Mr. Paepcke for the current quarter follows the substantial gain shown in the first three months of this year when net income amounted to $135,387 as compared with $35,801 for the comparable 1929 period.

Port of Boston News

By CARL MORRISON
"Ship News Editor:

"I would like to go to sea, but I do not know the initial steps to take. I am a boy of 16 years of age, and a sophomore in the Boston Trade School. I am very interested in the sea, ships and sailors. If a club of this sort were formed I would join immediately."

This letter from William Di Pietro of 45 Everett st., East Boston, is typical of several received at the Boston Evening American. A few days ago a casual mention was made of plans to form a club to be known under some heading as "Boston American Mariners."

The response is proving encouraging and when a sufficient number of letters are received, first steps will be taken. The club is open to any boy in New England of at least 15 years of age and will at least a fraternal club education in any high school.

The "first year" high school requirements will be made so that there will have members who are capable of understanding the radio tablet and newspaper items in navigation, seamanship, etc.

Several of the younger and older shipping people are willing to help form the club and give free instructions in sea lore. Among them are: Capt. Dennis McCarthy, who has trained scores of youths in passing their "ticket" tests; and Capt. Gerald A. Lord, a veteran of the Massachusetts Nautical Training Schoolship Nantucket.

Today's Safety Rule

Rule No. 27 reads:

"When it is necessary to remove or replace Sweedock hatches and beams, always have sufficient room for this operation."

The ship news editor feels qualified to give free sea advice to those about to go on their first voyage before, after or on the mast.

Lesson No. 1:

"If you want to make a hit with the captain, ask him on your first day out where to find the red lamp-black. He'll be glad to tell you—every last thing."

Our "old timer" today writes:

"I well remember when Mayor Curley once became jealous. This is the only time on record that our elected public-speaking executive has envied the oratorical powers of any man. The speaker was the Chariton and the occasion was a dramatic speech made by Jim to delegates of the clerks' union. His fiery address left everyone spellbound."

Today's Who's Who

From kitchen boy in a hotel, at the age of 14 years, to his present position as city councilor and State pier official, is the record of the subject of today's Who's Who. Hon. Clement A. Norton, Ward 18 representative and pier councilor of Commonwealth Pier, is the "man of the hour." Attention is particularly in the harbor limelight just now. Norton's career is typically American. This once kitchen boy and factory worker attended night school for 20 years, and won these honors: Bachelor of laws, bachelor of business, master of business administration and master of education. He is a past commander of the American Legion and in demand as a public speaker.

Clement A. Norton

Longshoremen to Play

Plans are progressing for the new baseball team of Steve Mc-Sergt. "Pip" Costanza, who was a "top kick" in the Y. D. during all his spare time during the late World War, is trying out for catcher as coplayer with DeMalo. Costanza was formerly with the East Boston All Stars. "Mac" Searles, team and manager, has also secured the services of Henry Grant now employed at the Bethlehem-Atlantic works, who will be in an infield position.

Dick Hoey is known as "Zipper" and as "Slickie." He is a former fish pier teamster, but now he labors at putting on and taking off hatches.

Shipping Items

On the Malchace, from Tampa, Fla., is a full cargo of phosphate rock for Boston. This is the first cargo of its kind in some time.

When the Rogers & Webb steamer Louis reaches Philadelphia on July 1, after stopping off at Boston June 26, from Hamburg, she will be temporarily taken out of the shipping board service. This oil burner will be converted into a pulverized fuel burner at Boston's expense, for which $60,000 has been set aside. She is the first such experiment. The others are Mercer and West Alsek, both, of the Gulfine line.

Baltimore is bragging as it says: "We recently had an eastbound shipment of 1,000 bags of flour. The consignee sent five trucks to our pier, each taking 125 sacks. Just one truck and one load. Later the sacks were all in their warehouses."

Baltimore challenges other cities to beat this record. How about it, Boston?

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

LARGEST EVENING
CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND

We Need an American Administration. Bring Back Coolidge and Americanism, Coolidge and Patriotism, Coolidge and Confidence

Testimony taken at the hearings on the London Naval Treaty before the committees on foreign relations and naval affairs shows conclusively that the traditional American position which President Coolidge upheld at Geneva was surrendered by President Hoover at London.

As a result, the British and the Japanese got from President Hoover at London the sort of treaty which President Coolidge refused to give them at Geneva.

In view of this disclosure the committee on foreign relations must examine all the exchanges leading up to and during the Geneva conference as well as those bearing on the London conference if the work of the two conferences is to be intelligently compared.

It is not only the right of that committee to examine all these exchanges, but it is the bounden duty of the committee to demand them — the Geneva as well as the London correspondence—before it undertakes to advise the Senate regarding its disposition of the London treaty.

Moreover, a comparison of the way in which President Coolidge championed the cause of his own country at Geneva and of the instructions which he gave to the delegates that he sent there, with the course of the American delegation at London and the instructions under which they acted, ought to be informing, perhaps inspiring, to Senators in general and in particular to those Senators who have the honor to hold membership on "the great committee of the Senate."

President Coolidge had his reasons for preferring the advice and counsel of the highest American naval authorities in regard to the naval needs of this country to the advice and counsel of British and Japanese naval authorities.

President Coolidge had his reasons for refusing to abandon the principle of limitation by categories of ships and the 5-5-3 ratio agreed to by the United States, Great Britain and Japan at the Washington conference.

President Coolidge had his reasons for refusing to permit the British to dictate to the United States the kind of cruisers this country should build to protect American commerce and to defend American territory.

President Coolidge had his reasons for insisting that the primary function of the American navy, which, since the days of President Washington, has been the protection of American sea-borne commerce, should not be changed.

President Coolidge had his reasons for refusing to disregard the advice and counsel and warnings and recommendations in regard to naval policy and technical matters of the highest American naval authorities.

And the committee on foreign relations should inform itself of the reasons which President Coolidge had for pursuing the course he did at Geneva in order that it may advise the Senate wisely regarding the reasons which President Hoover may offer for making at London the surrender which President Coolidge refused to make at Geneva.

Let the committee on foreign relations demand the Geneva papers as well as the London papers before it presumes to advise the Senate whether the cardinal principles of American naval policy since the days of Washington should be maintained or abandoned.

Only by a careful comparison of the Geneva papers with the London papers can Senator Borah and his committee qualify themselves to advise the Senate whether President Coolidge was right when he vigorously upheld the American position at Geneva or whether President Hoover was right when he surrendered the American position at London without a struggle.

Not Too Good

And Not Too Bad

The Legislature of 1930 has passed into history. An estimate of it can be made without bias.

It will take its place neither in the fore rank with the constructive, progressive and formidable assemblies we have known nor in the dismal rear guard with the reactionary, controlled and corrupt bodies which have disgraced our history at times.

It followed the path of least resistance. It put its best foot forward occasionally, but often with trembling and halting.

To its credit are the measures to provide home education for crippled children, to provide assistance to aged and indigent citizens, to extend some measure of long-delayed home rule to the city of Boston and the airing of the notorious Boston police scandals which culminated in the removal of Herbert A. Wilson as Police Commissioner.

Governor Allen, and the Legislature with him, are entitled to commendation for their efforts to obtain a quicker abandonment of that antiquated fire-trap and moral and physical death house—the Charlestown State Prison.

The decision to submit the proposed repeal of the State Volstead Law to the people was in compliance with the best democratic principles.

To its discredit was its refusal to revise the vexatious and unjust tax laws, with their onerous burden carried for thirteen years by the earners of small incomes.

To its discredit was its refusal to establish a sane and effective regulation of the power corporations.

Nor did the Legislature of 1930 manifest any lively and courageous interest in tackling the auto liability system, which has become an intolerable nuisance as well as a serious burden.

In this estimate a division should be made between the House and the Senate. Men like Speaker Saltonstall, Henry L. Shattuck, Leo Birmingham and the Democrats as a whole have fulfilled the high traditions. The Senate remained the burying-ground of much progressive legislation.

Facts for Grumblers

Some Massachusetts Millions

The next time you run up against a sour old pessimist hand him the following facts:

Massachusetts manufacturers expended $46,000,000 last year in additions to their plants and in the installation of new machinery, or $13,300,000 more than was expended for the same purposes in the preceding year.

They added to their facilities about 5,000,000 square feet of floor space, or nearly double the amount of the preceding year.

The additions to their personnel also were in excess of the earlier period.

We hear much grumbling about the "decline" of the shoe industry. Well, the latest figures obtainable from the Department of Commerce show that Massachusetts produced 122,750,000 pairs last year, or thirty-four per cent of the entire production in this country, as compared with thirty-five per cent in 1928 and thirty-three per cent in each of the three preceding years.

A single grumble can sometimes make more noise than a barrelful of facts.

Congratulations

Congratulations to—

FORMER CONGRESSMAN HENRY L. BOWLES, whose initiative and generosity have provided at Agawam, Massachusetts, the largest and best equipped airport in the East.

CAPTAIN JOSEPH P. HANTON, JOHN J. BOYLE, WILLIAM O. CHESWELL and JOHN J. MARTIN of the Boston Fire Department, whose courage in saving the lives of others at the risk of their own have won the annual award for the most conspicuous acts of bravery in a valorous department.

QUINCY, MALDEN and NEWTON, whose notable gains in population have added new lustre and new responsibilities to them in the industrial and civic life of the Commonwealth.

CONGRESSMAN JOHN W. McCORMACK, whose warning of the dangers of foreign entanglements was one of the most thoughtful oratorical efforts of the many patriotic and commendable speeches on the holiday.

H. G. Wells Writes

ON "THE SCIENCE OF LIFE"

During fission the old organs disappear, new organs appear in each future individual, and, while division is being effected, develop into their definitive forms and integrate to their definitive stations.

H. G. Wells

Binary fission, we may note, is by no means unknown in many-celled animals. Not only do many sea-anemones reproduce by splitting themselves slowly through from the mouth downwards, but this longitudinal fission is one of the main methods by which the huge colonies of corals are built up from a single original polyp.

Transverse division, on the other hand, occurs in various worms, especially Planarians.

From this method, two other main methods of sexual reproduction have been derived.

One is multiple fission. In this the single individual divides into many small ones, either by a series of binary fissions following immediately one upon the other without any growth between, or, more frequently in single-celled forms, the central nucleus alone divides repeatedly and the cell as a whole then splits up simultaneously into as many miniature cells as there are nuclei.

The parent individual becomes a mass of small cells. This method is frequent with single-celled creatures which grow—comparatively speaking—to a large size, such as Foraminifers, or the common large Amoeba, and is found also in the malarial parasite.

The other method consists in making the two products of division unequal. Sometimes, as in various Flatworms and Annelid worms, reproduction is by transverse division, but the hinder individual is at first small and unformed, and only gradually grows and develops.

This method has the biological advantage that the original individual retains its individuality, its head and general alertness, while giving rise to a new specimen from the less specialized tissues of its hinder parts.

Sometimes we find this process repeated, and then whole chains of incompletely developed individuals may arise behind the original head, trailing after it until growth has developed them far enough to be detached.

Another variation of this method is adopted by the polyp form from which, in many species of jelly-fish, the adult medusae arise. Instead of a string of offspring trailing behind a moving parent, the new individuals appear upon the parent as a fixed stem.

The advantage here lies in retaining the fixed attachment during the whole process. The original fixed polyp (which develops from the fertilized egg) becomes divided by a series of transverse grooves into what looks like a pile of miniature saucers, frilled and lappeted at their edges.

The top one of these is the most advanced in development, and is the first to be cut off and swim away as a baby medusa, the rest one by one following suit, leaving the parent stalk to divide and divide again.

When the size of parent and offspring is markedly unequal we speak of budding. This is rare in single-celled types, but is the commonest form of sexless reproduction in many-celled plants and animals.

Its adoption confers the advantage of leaving the original individual fully formed and active all the time, dispensing with any need for reorganization, by putting all the excess material of growth direct into rapidly developing buds, which can be thrown off when they are fit to look after themselves.

Don't Use Trouble as a Hideaway

Ever see a rabbit ducking into its burrow, trying to escape some panting pup? That's what some folk do with sorrow and trouble. Duck into it as though it were a burrow—hide themselves in it to escape that panting pup, Reality.

Elsie Robinson

You've seen it done scores of times. Perhaps you've done it yourself, I have. Grief comes. Any one of a hundred forms of grief. The death of some loved one. The loss of a fine job. An unhappy love affair. Sickness. Sudden shock or shame. Remorse over some big blunder. And the thing gets us down—

Of course, we know we should jump up and tackle life again. But it's so terribly hard. Our hearts have been broken. Our courage has been shaken. Our egotism has been terribly hurt. We're tired and frightened and sad—and mad! We don't want to face life again, any more than the rabbit wants to face that pup. We want to get away from life—hide, be safe.

Maybe we've always felt that way, secretly. Perhaps we have not been very keen on facing life. Naturally, we want all the regular rewards out of life.

We want to be admired, we want to succeed. But we dread a struggle. We're afraid of being laughed at. And we certainly hate hard work. So we've always had a sneaking desire to duck Reality. But we never had a chance to duck, decently. People expected us to fight. They'd have blamed us or ridiculed us if we had quit. We couldn't stand that. But, now at last our chance has come. We can quit without being blamed or becoming unpopular. We're in trouble and everyone is sorry for people in trouble.

We don't reason it out that way. But we feel it out that way—and we seize the chance. Instead of running away from trouble, we hide ourselves in it. Instead of fighting defeat, we make an alibi of it—a profession of it. We become defeatists. And the world no longer knows us as regular, active citizens. It knows us as "Poor old Ed, who lost his job" or "Poor dear Nelly, who lost her little girl" or "Those poor Smiths, who had that frightful experience."

And Ed and Nelly and the Smiths sit back, complacent at the thought of their unique sufferings and consoled by all these excuses and coddlings.

Well, defeatism is a great racket for cowards and egotists—

Just as burrows are a great racket for frightened rabbits.

But the racket doesn't last.

Rabbits speedily sicken if they stay in burrows too much. So do humans. The darkness of a burrow, however safe, is a very poor exchange for the sunshine and hazard of the open air. And the safety and indolence of defeatism in contemptible exchange for the glorious challenge of Reality.

Don't be a defeatist. Don't duck and hide from Reality. Crawl out of that grave. Scramble up from that beating. Stiffen your chin—clench your fists—face life! Dare that old panting pup of Reality to come on and do his darndest!

Capital Silhouettes

By GEORGE R. BROWN

IT may be true, as Deets Pickett, pinch-hitting for Rev. Clarence Cross-My-Heart Wilson, tells the lobby committee, that Mr. Hoover was elected in 1928 by the churches and not by the Republican party, but he can't get the Rapidan naval treaty ratified in the same way.

IN the brave days of yore a United States Senator preferred to resign his seat rather than vote against his conscience in a manner instructed by his State, but nowadays we have more Wesley Joneses in the Senate than we have John Tylers.

Caring for the Aged

Massachusetts now joins the roll of States, altogether too small, which provide care for their aged and indigent citizens.

Persons who have reached the age of seventy and who have lived within the State twenty years are to be granted what, for lack of a better term, is to be known as "assistance."

"Such assistance shall be given to the aged person in his home or in lodgings AND IT SHALL BE SUFFICIENT TO PROVIDE SUITABLE AND DIGNIFIED CARE."

Mr. Wendell P. Thore and the others who have battled so valiantly for many years in behalf of old-age pensions do not find the terms of the new law according to their liking. But they have made a start and by their continued interest and good judgment they can mould it to better form in the future. They are entitled to the gratitude of the kindly disposed people of this State.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

New York, June 2—Diary of a modern Pepys: A letter from Billy B Van, the minstrel, who is living in the New Hampshire pines and happier than ever before. Also a cable from South Africa from a man I do not recall asking a ticket home. This day my wife bought for us permanent living quarters at 290 Park ave.

With my mother-in-law to drive to Greenwich, Conn., and the Hutchison river road one of singular beauty. And we stopped under a leafy maple and ate sugar cookies and drank milk from a thermos. So home and met again Pat O'Brien, who wrote that red corpuscled anonymous volume "Wine, Women and War."

In the evening to a dinner and talked with Robert P. Scripps, the publisher, about this, that and the other and also to Tom White and Dave Town. And on my way home could kick myself for always introducing people at parties who were either graduated together or knew each other all their lives.

Some one explain this: On my desk was a phone message to call a gentleman at Wickersham 5000 about an important matter. He did want to discuss something of importance, but had not communicated with me in any way, knowing about it himself just two minutes before I telephoned. The only other person concerned was in India. And I'm beginning to look under tables and chairs.

Only two New York theaters have rows lettered I, the reason being its similarity to J. In most theaters, too, Row A, has been abolished to make room for an orchestra pit.

One of the fastest tap dancers on Broadway is actually named Ginger Pepper Rogers although Pepper is dropped in programs. Incidentally she is a Texas red head who never had a dancing lesson.

Indeed, the most agile of the feather-footed guild are not "college trained." Illustrious examples —who began as youngsters dancing along the sidewalks—are George White, Jack Donahue, James Barton, Frisco, Will Mahoney and innumerable other headliners.

The man who has elevated more dancers and singers to stardom than any other cannot carry a tune or do the simplest step. He is the lavender-shirted and pouty Flo Ziegfeld.

In a tea room the other afternoon there arrived a stalwart six footer, a trifle embarrassed among fashionable flappers and oily-haired cuff shooters. He wore a buff two-gallon hat, high-heeled Texas star boots with glittering spurs and a bull-durham tag dangled from his shirt pocket. He accepted tea, but did not taste it. The big room was buzzing with conversation before he entered but was painfully silent until he left. For some reason a group of gossip-mongering and tea drinking New Yorkers became suddenly and miserably self conscious.

A six-year-old boy has been in my workshop for the past hour giving one-man shows for when he extorted a penny. A few moments ago he exclaimed: "Stop typewriting the hero is dying!" And he ended it all with an imaginary shot from an imaginary revolver. Then he left with a new dignity when I giggled out loud, and somehow I feel rather mean about it myself.

A silver handled cane engraved with my name turned up in a Third ave. pawnshop to be discovered by Edgar M. Carr, who redeems and returns it with his compliments. The cane was left in a taxi 16 years ago after a dinner at Guffanti's—one of the those 50-cent dinners with vin ordinaire, after which one doesn't care what happens to a cane.

From a news item: "He worked as a hostler on their Long Island estate and was dismissed for proposing marriage to their debutante daughter."
